Cosgrove Parades 50 Blocks
In 18 Hour Convention Parade

Howard Cosgrove, proprietor of Cosgrove's Bakery on Main Street, Dallas, is one man who has a personal appreciation of the magnitude of the American Legion parade in New York City last week.

Playing with the band from John Starke Post, West Pittston, Mr. Cosgrove paraded the length of the route, approximately fifty blocks. Ironically enough, Mr. Cosgrove saw very little of the parade itself. The band members were so exhausted when they ended they were glad to go someplace and rest.

The band in which Mr. Cosgrove played was honored on Sunday night by being selected to play on a radio program which was broadcast on a nation-wide hook-up. Although he enjoyed the experience, Mr. Cosgrove says he has no ambition to be a regular radio performer. The technique of broadcasting, he says, differs radically from concert work and "mike fright," which bothered most of the members of the band, is a very real malady.

The whole Cosgrove family is musical. Mr. Cosgrove plays the bass horn, Howard, Jr., is a baritone and trombone player in the same band. Donald plays bass horn and piano, and a third son, Kenneth, is a violinist.

Others from here who attended the Legion Convention were Arthur Dungey, Arthur J. Brown, and Charles Reigel, members of the Daddow-Isaacs Post.
