Lehman High School, only undefeated team in the Back Mountain, will go to Tunkhannock this afternoon.

Henry Isaacs Is Called By Death

Respected Shavertown Man Dies After Year's Illness

Henry Isaacs, a well-known resident of Shavertown, died last Friday afternoon at his home, 114 Shaver avenue. He had been ill a year, having suffered a heart attack last year after a visit to Bloomsburg Fair.

A large crowd attended the funeral on Monday afternoon, testifying to the high regard in which Mr. Isaacs had been held. The services were held at the home, with Rev. Fred M. Sellers, pastor of Shavertown M. E. church, officiating. Interment was in Woodlawn cemetery.

Flower carriers, all nieces of Mr. Isaacs, were Mildred Malkames, Grace Williams, Pauline Isaacs, Agnes Pyne, Naomi Ashburner, Agnes El-

Ku Klux Klan Eager To Regain Its Lost Power

were even cases where it decided factional quarrels in church organizations.

Then, just before depression struck, public opinion turned against the Klan and one by one members began dropping out. The long, white robes, carrying the crusader's red cross, became relics and the Klan in Dallas became a thing of the past.

But the Klan is rising, phoenix-like, from the ashes. Whether it can survive the criticism which spelled its doom in 1927 or whether it will fade more quickly than before only time can tell. Whatever its future, today the Klan rides again.

has finally discovered the enthusiastic plug we gave them in this column way back in July. We had a letter from them last week and our excitement and letter arrived, thanking us more and notifying us that a free copy was on the way to us. It was our turn to be thankful then and so we wrote telling them what we think of "Life" and now guess what we've got! An invitation to visit them. We feel just like a small boy who has received an autographed baseball from Babe Ruth.

We had another letter this week, from a fellow who has just returned from a journalistic jaunt through Europe. This paragraph is worth a bigger audience: "Europe is perceptibly an armed camp these days, and the incongruity of each nation welcoming the tourists of other nations while at the same time getting ready to blow them to bits is apparent. What stands out in my mind after the trip is the friendliness and simplicity of the working-class people in every country, and of their spontaneous absence of all preparations for war." had scarcely died down when a sec-
