Mr. Buckingham conducted this business for several years. He was one of the early industrial and commercial leaders of the Township, and was the first postmaster at Kingston. Following his failure, the mill was occupied by Matthias Hollenback. Toward the end of its period of operation, the mill was occupied by the firm of McGuire and Matthers.

It is interesting to know that Mr. McGuire had three sons who served during the civil war in the Northern Army. Mr. Matthers had several sons and daughters who for many years were familiar to many people as teachers in the schools of Kingston Township.

Another interesting character at one time connected with the mill was John Faser, who came to this country from Germany, and was a master paper maker. He lived in a house on the opposite side of the road from the

SITE OF TOLL GATE

On this site stood the old toll house of the Dallas Turnpike and nearby was a watering trough, at which the farmers watered their teams on the way to and from the market in the valley. The last toll keeper was Harry Whitney who was a familiar figure for many years before the County took over the road.

With the advent of steam power, the mill was closed about the year 1840, the old water wheel became silent, the site was vacated, and no trace of former activity was left to mark the spot.
