

Settlers Warmed Feet On Stove At Kunkle Services

tive when he grew up, which largely put Kunkle where she is today. As long as the timber lasted he was a leading lumberman of the region. When the timber and the tannery were gone, and the people had to turn their attention to other means of earning a livelihood, he equipped his farm with a large herd of cattle, and began to produce milk on a big scale.

He established the Standard Dairy in Wilkes-Barre, and for many years this was one of the leading distributors of milk in Wyoming Valley. Everybody in Kunkle went into the dairy business, and the Standard Dairy bought their milk, giving them 3 1/2 cents in summer and 4 1/2 cents in winter, at a time when milk retailed for 8 cents a quart in summer and 9 cents in winter. Money poured into the community, and the improvements so conspicuous in the village today are the result of that period of prosperity. Besides his dairy interests, he raised a fine breed of Normandy horses which were appreciated and admired wherever seen.

Besides his two sons, Philip Kunkle had four daughters: Maria, who married Simeon Spencer; Sally Ann, who married Rev. John P. Rice; Lydia, who married William Allen; and Jemima, who married Abram Ryman.

The Kunkle family is largely Democratic politically, and most of the descendants lean to the Methodist faith religiously.

Kunkle supplied a goodly number of soldiers for the Civil War—Charles Kunkle, John Kunkle, Joseph Hoover, Seaman Hoover, Henry Hoover, George Hoover, Marcellus May, Samuel Lozo, Aaron Moss, Wesley Moss, Dwight Woolcot, Vester Shoemaker, Oliver Fisher, John Beam, Jefferson Miers, Isaac Huey, Charles Oakley, Spencer Hunt, John Evans and John King.

Charles Kunkle and Joseph Hoover belonged to the famous 143rd regiment which fought at Gettysburg, where the former was wounded. Joseph Hoover fought there with distinguished valor, rescuing the beautiful silk flag that was presented to the boys by the women of Wilkes-Barre. The following poem was written by Miss Anna E. Kunkle in memory of his heroism, and was published in the Wilkes-Barre Record at the time of the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg.

JOSEPH HOOVER

Kunkle a hero has? That's fine!

Let's pass the word along the line, Hoover by name, first name Joe. Where her crystal brooks do downward flow,

From her greenwood hills, a boy he played,

Climbed the mountains and killed and flayed,

Rough lumber-jacks taught him to fight,

He learned it well, the wild young wight

His tightened brow and bulldog jaw Did yield to naught but love and law.

When word was passed from mouth to mouth,

John Brown lay dead in the sunny South—

That insult had been offered there To our dear flag, "Old Glory", where Fort Sumter stands,—Joe dropped his axe,

And swelled the crowd, his wrath did wax, As down he marched to join the throng, 143rd took him along.

At Gettysburg on July one, The battle then had but begun,

Crippen, a boy, the colors bore, Just turned nineteen, but little more,

A target for bullets, One went through And he dropped to earth in his coat of blue.

Joe loved the lad, and loved the stars And the thirteen stripes that cost men

The wild, victorious rebel yell Stung like a snake. As Crippen fell, Mad with rage, he gave a bound,

And reached the spot on the hard fought ground,

The standard snatched,—the tattered rag

That once had been a silken flag, And, raising high the rescued staff,

With long and loud derisive laugh, Flaunted it there the "rebs" to flout; They tried right hard to put him out, But when night dropped with gentle grace,

The flag and Joe were both in place. At home in peace since '65 On a hillside farm. Yes, still alive, And comrades old remember well What Hoover did when Crippen fell.

When Pennsylvania collected the Civil War flags of the State, to put them into the State House at Harrisburg, it was necessary to cut off a piece of the staff of that of the 143rd regiment. This was presented to the post and a gavel was fashioned from it, which was always used at their meetings. When this gavel was dedicated, the heroism of Joseph Hoover, in rescuing the flag at Gettysburg, was mentioned in the address by the orator of the occasion.

Behind The Scenes In Business World

NEW YORK, Aug. 29—BUSINESS—Industrial production went into a nose-dive just about one year ago. Instead of having the customary seasonal business spurt last fall, the country entered a new depression which persisted for 10 months. Not until July, 1938, did the clouds begin to lift. Further clearing of the skies occurred in August, and by now the frown has disappeared from the brow of most business forecasters. Their prediction for fall and winter business is "fair and warmer." The outlook is excellent, they say, the more so because there is much lost ground to be made up. Factory sales of automobiles, for example, amounted to only 1,345,311 the first seven months this year compared with 3,227,266 in the same period last year. This means that the average life of all automobiles on the road has been increasing during 1938, and a potential demand is being stored up which sooner or later must exert itself. Estimates of national income, represented by the flow of wages, salaries, dividends, interest and profits of individual owners of businesses, for 1938 have been revised upward a billion dollars by the Department of Commerce to $61,000,000,000 as a result of trade improvement since June. This figure, however, falls almost 12 per cent below last year's $69,000,000,000 national income.

HEADLINES IN NEW YORK—Butter prices drop to 1934 levels as supplies reach new high . . . U. S. and Great Britain reported near accord on reciprocal trade agreement . . . Factory payrolls in nation rise $4 per cent in July, reversing previous downward trend . . . Sales of office equipment gain in August . . . Secretary of State Hull demands Mexico settle for land seizures under international law . . . Drug and chemical industry will spend $24,943,500 for research and scientific development of new products this year . . . WPA employment now 3,038,906, an all-time peak . . . New synthetic textile fibre being developed by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. may threaten remaining market for natural silk . . . Canada refuses to join with U. S. in wheat sales plan; will adhere to its present export subsidy to market surplus . . . Despite record flow of deliveries, unfilled orders of aircraft industry are 15 per cent higher than on January 1 . . . Large rise in index of industrial output by October seen by the Federal Reserve Board.
