THE BATTLE OF WYOMING (Continued)

On March 10 the savages made an attack on Samuel Ransom's house in Plymouth, wounding him, though not severely. A spirited resistance was made and one Indian left dead on the field. At the commencement of the war the proprietors, foreseeing danger, and the whole settlement being desirous that those beautiful and productive alluvial lands, should not be entirely neglected, made an agreement with several people to give them the use of all the land they could cultivate during the war if they would build block-houses of sufficient strength to defend it and keep possession.

Among those associated for the purpose were Alexander Jameson, Major Prince Alden, Joseph Jameson, Abraham Nesbitt, Jonah Rogers, Samuel Ayres, Mr. Ransom and others. Except at the general expulsion after the massacre in 1778, the lessees, some of whom were proprietors, held their ground. Defending themselves, fighting, suffering, they still maintained their position.

On April 28, 1781, Captain Spalding's company was ordered to march and Captain Mitchell was directed to assume command in lieu of Colonel Butler. It is assumed this action was at the instigation of the Pennsylvania proprietaries, and was intended to get the Connecticut troops as much as possible out of the Valley.

INDIANS ATTACK AT BUTTWOOD

On Sunday, June 9, a party of twelve Indians made an attack on a blockhouse at Buttwood, in Hanover, three miles below the Wilkes-Barre fort. They met with a warm reception. The house was gallantly defended, the women aiding the men with alacrity and spirit. A party from the fort, on receiving the alarm, hastened down and found pools of blood, where Lieutenant Rosewell Franklin had wounded, and probably killed, an Indian. A terrible revenge followed. Scouts constantly on the watch, one going out as another returned, ascended the river from fifty to eighty miles, and sought the enemy in every direction. On Tuesday, the 14th, Lieutenant Crain shot at and wounded an Indian within 600 yards of the garrison. The Rev. Mr. Johnson now returned from his exile in Connecticut, having been compelled to fly after the massacre in 1778.

In the autumn of this year Captain James Bidlack returned amid the rejoicing of the people from his captivity. He was accompanied by Mr. Harvey. Both had been paroled by the British.

THE MONUMENT AT WYOMING

"The Wyoming Commemorative Association" was incorporated December 31, 1881. Incorporators: Charles Dorrance, Edmund L. Dana, Steuben Jenkins, Garrick M. Harding, Wesley Johnson, Abel Baker, L. D. Shoemaker, Harry Hakes, R. J. Wisner, Payne Pettebone, D. S. Bennett, Stanley Woodward, Calvin Parsons. Officers: President, Charles Dorrance; vice-presidents, E. L. Dana, L. D. Shoemaker, Calvin Parsons, H. Hollister, and Steuben Jenkins; treasurer, Harry Hakes; secretary, Wesley Johnson; corresponding secretary, Abel Baker; librarian, D. S. Bennett.

The approach of the centennial anniversary of the Wyoming Battle stimulated the descendants of the heroes of the day to prepare for its suitable celebration. In the month of June, 1887, Steuben Jenkins and Calvin Parsons by chance met in Wilkes-Barre and conferred on the subject and agreed that immediate action should be taken in the premises. The preliminary work was at once entered upon.

Steuben Jenkins and Wesley Johnson sent out special invitations to the living descendants to meet at the Wilkes-Barre courthouse on July 3, 1887. The first meeting was therefore held on the ninety-ninth anniversary of the battle. Among others at the meeting were Hon. Steuben Jenkins, Hon. Edmund L. Dana, Gov. Henry M. Hoyt, Hon. Lazarus D. Shoemaker, Col. Charles Dorrance, Dr. Horace Hollister of Providence, Priestly R. Johnson, Calvin Parsons and Wesley Johnson.

General Dana presided. Dr. Hollister and Mr. Jenkins made addresses. A committee of seventeen was appointed to report at a subsequent meeting—all of them were lineal descendants of the participants of the battle. The members of the committee corresponded with the "seventeen townships"—the Connecticut claim.

DESCENDANTS OF PIONEERS

Steuben Jenkins was a grandson of Col John Jenkins of colonial times. Judge Dana was a grandson of Anderson Dana, who had hurried from the Hartford Assembly to lay down his life for freedom. Calvin Parsons was a descendant of the Dana stock on the maternal side. Dr. Hollister was of the family of Hollisters who lost their lives in the first massacre of Wyoming in 1763.

Stewart Pearce, author of a valuable history, "Annals of Luzerne", was of the house of Lazarus Stewart. Col. Charles Dorrance, a grandson of Col. George Dorrance. Hon. L. D. Shoemaker was of the blood of Col. Denison and of Capt. Elijah Shoemaker. The latter was killed on the battle field. Jesse Harding, a representative of the Hardings who were attacked in the field and killed by Col. Butler's men, was the grandson of the only boy to escape that dark massacre.

Standard's Beer Noted For 'Zing'

Brew Has Been Favorite In This Section Since 1905

Swing, as in Benny Goodman, is mostly for Jitterbugs, but "Zing" as in Tru-Age Beer, is something we all can appreciate and enjoy. And Zing is that certain thing that comes along with the mellowness of proper aging in a refreshing glass of Tru-Age.

Almost anybody will agree that there's nothing that hits the spot on a hot summer's afternoon quite so well as a tall, cool, foam-capped glass of good beer. But the brisk, windy days of fall and winter are dead ahead. And that's where good old Tru-Age comes to bat again, with all the punch of young Joe Dimaggio, for Tru-Age Beer is satisfying and refreshing all year 'round.

Tru-Age Beer is a product of the Standard Brewing Company, Scranton's leading brewers' concern, established in that city in 1905. The popularity gained by the company's famous brews, Tru-Age and Standard Beer, and Crystal Ale, has brought about constant expansion, both in sales territory and brewing facilities. The firm has an extension office in Kingston, on Wyoming Avenue just below the Forty Fort line.

Tru-Age is not just a catch phrase. It may be taken at its face value. And then there's that thing, Zing. All of which makes Tru-Age a good buy for anybody's money.

'Smiling Service' Oliver's Slogan

Local Garage Has Splendid Reputation For Fairness To Customers

James R. Oliver's garage and Packard sales rooms on Main Street, Dallas, where the customer gets "smiling service always", thrives today, the results of over a decade of expansion, improvement and square dealing.

Mr. Oliver, who got his start modestly enough with a garage and Maxwell agency in Meeker, realized several years ago his need for a bigger market, and situated himself in Dallas in 1925. He worked hard on developing his new territory and expended his sales scope to such an extent that his agency became one of the outstanding Packard sales units in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Today Mr. Oliver is one of the more widely respected and well-fitted automobile dealers in Luzerne county, a tribute to his policies and industry. But he is not content to rest on his laurels. One of Dallas' most enthusiastic boosters, Mr. Oliver is proprietor of a business which spreads far beyond the borders of the town and attracts customers from neighboring and Wyoming Valley towns into Dallas.
