Artist And Author, She Is Survived By Local Man

Widow of the late Hon. D. L. Rhone, first judge of the Luzerne County Orphans' Court, Mrs. Rosamond Dodson Rome, a sister of D. W. Dodson, Fernbrook, died suddenly at her home in Huntington Park, Cal. She was buried in California.

Mrs. Rhone was born in Downville, Cal., in 1854, the only daughter of Osborne and Lucy Wadsworth Dodson. Her father had gone to California in 1850 as a surveyor for gold and was at one time surveyor for the county of Sierra. He came back to Huntington Township to marry Miss Wadsworth and returned to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama, which they crossed on ox-carts.

Mrs. Rhone spent her youth here. She attended school at Town Hill and graduated from Wyoming Seminary in 1873. She married Judge Rhone in 1879.

She was an artist and an author. She published two books, "Among the Dunes" and "The Days of the Son of Man." She also contributed many articles to the New York Times. The National Geographic Magazine published an illustrated article she wrote while visiting her daughter, Mrs. Helen Clapp, an employee of the English government, on the Island of Narn, a British possession below the equator in the Pacific Ocean. She described the island, which is of a phosphate formation.

Mrs. Rhone also spent some time in Australia. Her late years were spent in California, with her daughter, Mrs. Clapp, who, with her three sons, and the two children of Mrs. Wilcox, deceased, of Wilmington, Del., and her brother, D. W. Dodson, survive her.
