Mrs. A. R. Holcomb Passes 84, Says She "Feels Too Young To Be So Old"

"We oldtimers may be antiques," says Mrs. A. R. Holcomb of Huntsville, "but everyone knows that antiques are very valuable."

Antique or no antique, Mrs. Holcomb, who celebrated her 84th Birthday anniversary Monday, still does a good day's work about her home and readily admits to being as good a cook as the best of 'em.

Active, hale and hearty, she laughs as much about being considered old as does a longtime friend of hers, Mrs. Frank Prutzman of Huntsville, 84 years young herself, who came around to visit her Monday. "I just can't believe I'm as old as my friends say I am," says Mrs. Holcomb. "Perhaps that's because those same friends are the ones who keep me feeling so young."

She was born in Hanover Township January 16, 1855, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ramage. When she was a young girl her father purchased the tract of land where she lives to this day and brought his family out to what was then just a tiny community.

Married to Asa R. Holcomb, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Holcomb, pioneer residents of Shavertown, when she was about 20 years old, she left this section for a time and lived with her husband in Peabody, Kansas, for 13 years. Returning to Huntsville before the turn of the century, the couple took up their residence in the old family home on Huntsville road, where Mrs. Holcomb still lives.

Mrs. Holcomb's husband died five years ago this month, and since that time her daughter, Mrs. Hazel Ide, has lived with her. Mrs. Holcomb is an active member of Huntsville M. E. Church and the Ladies' Aid Society, and takes an interest in the Church Home Department.

She has four children, Mrs. Alice Ruth of Scranton, Edward Holcomb of Cresson, Mrs. Howard Jones of Plymouth and Mrs. Hazel Ide of Huntsville, eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Even in view of the fact she is a great grandmother, Mrs. Holcomb feels hardly a day over fifty. Well, fifty-one. "If you'll excuse me, young man, I've got some work I must do. The house has to be dusted," said Mrs. Holcomb, who thinks it's funny to be so old and yet feel so young.
