seven parties: Democratic, Republican, Royal Oak, Socialist, Pro- Keithline, hibition, Communist and Pathfinders. It is inconceivable that Messrs. Hitler, Stalin or Mussolini would permit on any ballot in their countries any party as alien to their aims as the Communist party is to the principles of this government. Yet, in a depression year, when many, many Americans were bitter and even hungry, the communist party could command no more than a ridiculous handful of votes, not even enough to assure it a place on the ballot again.

That's why, on May Day, it is with amusement, rather than hatred, that we settle down by the radio to enjoy the bulletins concerning the Class War. We looked forward toward this May Day, as usual. Alas, it was a disappointment. For some reason, the communists have lost their old spirit. It was a fine, sunny day, but very few of them marched anywhere, and the police, who formerly exercised their clubs with fine fervor on the heads of the marchers, were content to look on with bored tolerance.

It was nothing like the gory May Days of a few years ago. It must have been most disappointing to the communists, too, for the front pages on Tuesday were absolutely devoid of riot pictures. May Day, for the American Communist Party, was a flat failure. Having been encouraged to blow off steam year after year, the communists apparently had exhausted themselves completely.

• LOTS OF ADVERTISING is wasted because some business man expects a carelessly-written, hastily-planned, haphazardly-scheduled advertisement to perform miracles. Successful advertising is essential today to business success. Anyone with anything to sell must understand advertising today if he wants to secure the greatest return for his investment. Post advertisers secure that return because they have these elements in their campaigns:

1. A GOOD MARKET. No ad can pull sales unless it is directed to a market which is able to buy. The people in The Post's field are good customers, home-owners in one of the best markets in Northeastern Pennsylvania. And the market is growing constantly.

2. A GOOD NEWSPAPER. The Post has a proud reputation for its streamlined editorial policies and typography, its civic crusades, its accurate and complete coverage ... which means reader loyalty to help the advertiser win confidence from The Post's staunch friends.

3. KNOWING THE READERS. The same elements which have made The Post's editorial policies so successful can be employed in your advertising. We know what our readers like. The same formulae, applied to your advertising, will work for you, too.

4. IDEAS, ART WORK, LAYOUT AND COPY. The Post will supply free of charge to its advertisers, research-tested ad material . . . ad material that will SELL your merchandise or services.
