World's Fair Took Him West

money. It was really a job to carry your paycheck around."

Even now, the big silver dollars are far more common than bills. The other day Pete went into a barber shop over town to get a haircut. At first the barber refused the preferred dollar, claimed that all those old coins had been called into the treasury. "He muttered a little bit, but finally took it," Pete chuckled.

Down at the World's Fair, Pete and Fred had a swell time. They were especially impressed by the Democracy of the Perisphere and the General Motors exhibit, but enjoyed many of the lesser publicized attractions to.

"You should see that one show," Pete began, but Fred, looking a little apprehensive, cut in on him.

"Down there in New York, nobody seems to know anything about the town," Fred said. "The only man who could tell us which subway to take to get out to the Fair grounds was a fellow from Oregon who was a stranger, just like ourselves."

Next year Pete plans to go to the California Exposition at San Francisco and at the same time pay his first visit to the West Coast. "These Fairs really keep me moseying around," he says.

Pete is really proud of Colorado, which he says, is rapidly becoming the nation's playground. The state is dedicated, among other things, to the wholesome outdoor pleasures of its residents and visitors.

State parks and playgrounds, laid in the rugged and majestic scenery that is characteristic of the far West, are open all year around. Magnificent mountain peaks, turbulent mountain streams, rolling rivers, deep, blue lakes and beautiful wooded panoramas attract tourists from all over the country in steadily increasing numbers.

"Colorado is a sportsman's paradise," claims Pete. Hunting and fishing there, open to anyone, classes with the best in the nation. "And the nice thing about it is that it doesn't cost you a dime in fees and things like that."

Mr. and Mrs. Youngblood went out to visit Pete in Denver two years ago, and were much taken with the scenic wonders of the West. Among other points of interest, they visited Pike's Peak, which for many years was Colorado's chief bid for fame.

"There's a mountain," said Pete, "that's about 14,000 feet high, and a road goes right to the top." "14,108 feet high, Pete," Fred, who is a stickler for accuracy, corrected him.

Pete looked properly taken aback, pulled his wide-brimmed hat farther down over his eyes and puffed thoughtfully on his cigar. "Yep, Fred, I guess you're right."

The gentleman from Colorado allowed he was anxious to get back home so that he could get in some real fishing before the season closes. "When we go fishing out there, we always catch fish. The state keeps the streams well stocked from 23 big hatcheries."

Fred consulted a sheaf of postcards, nodded gravely. "That's right," he said. "23 hatcheries." Pete's favorite newspaper is the Denver Post, a daily which serves a territory somewhat larger than this paper—practically the whole state of Colorado, in fact. Whether he had revised his opinion since his arrival in Dallas he didn't say.

Pete ended his visit with the Youngbloods last Friday, and is now spending a few days with two other sisters, Miss Elizabeth Deutche and Mrs. Anna Utter, who live together at Hill Street, Wilkes-Barre.

It won't be long, now, before he'll board a train for Chicago, where he will take the new streamlined Zephyr home—sixteen hours by the clock from the windy city to Denver.

He doesn't expect to find that Colorado has turned the corner for prosperity in his absence. "Business conditions out there are the same as they are elsewhere in the country. Colorado won't boom again unless the new Silver Bill passes through Congress. But there's one nice thing about the depression out there. We all feel better about it."

Families on Relief supply the novelty. Of late they have been sending out their younger members to gather all they can of old newspapers. When a sufficient quantity is at hand there is instituted a process that transforms "print" into kindling.

Each paper is twisted into a compact cylinder of stove-wood length. Then, in the mass, the whole business is soaked down in water, either by hose or tub immersion. That solidifies the pulp. The water is drained off and the newsprint in its compressed mass is turned out, dry in the sun. In smaller quantities in some homes it is dried behind the kitchen stove.

Those who know, declare that the result is a substitute for cut wood that is better than the wood itself. In fact, this scrivener knows of a few families who burn nothing else. —javie aiche.

Cemetery Kept Within Bounds

Parish Stays Increase Of Pringle Grounds

The demand of Pringle taxpayers for council action to halt a proposed increase of St. Ignatius Cemetery was answered this week when borough officials gained a promise from the Kingston parish that the burial grounds will be kept within the original land grant.

This assurance, given a council committee by Rev. Francis J. McGuckin, pastor of the church, during a recent conference, terminated a controversy aroused a month ago when preparations were made to move the cemetery gates to front on Hoyt Street.

A plot of ground, deeded St. Ignatius parish by the Kingston Coal Company for the formation of a park in front of the cemetery, would have been enclosed in the burial grounds if the gates had been moved to the thoroughfare.

Fearing further property devaluation of Pringle and believing that property improvements and building on Hoyt Street would be discouraged if the cemetery was increased in that manner, residents of that section petitioned council to enforce an ordinance forbidding cemetery frontage on borough streets.

Father McGuckin's promise to keep the cemetery boundaries intact averted legal action which Pringle council had determined to take.

FALSE TEETH Cleaned Like Magic

Don't let dingy, yellow, tobacco-stained false teeth often with unpleasant breath, subject you to criticism, when all you have to do is put a level teaspoonful of Kleenite in half a glass of warm water. Into this solution put your denture or bridgework and leave it while you dress, or overnight. NO BRUSHING—just rinse and presto! your plates are like new, just like your dentist intended them to be—teeth bright and lustrous—gums natural-looking, not blackened or discolored; the whole plate sweet—clean.

Get Kleenite today—all druggists have it. Don't gamble—insist on Kleenite—the Dentist's Plate Cleaner.

Lumber Pioneer Dies At Lake

A. M. Biery Worked In Early Saw Mills

A. M. Biery, aged 75, who died at his home in Alderson two weeks ago Saturday morning after a two years' illness following a stroke, was one of the dwindling number of men who had a part in and remembered the great lumbering industry that once thrived throughout this region.

For more than fifty years, until illness confined him to his home, Mr. Biery was a familiar figure in the lumber and ice business along Bowman's Creek Branch and at Harvey's Lake.

Born in Northampton County, he early moved with his family to Lehman Township where he conducted a water mill for some years near Ceasetown. He left the milling business to go with the Albert Lewis Lumber Company and still later for more than forty-five years was associated with the Stull interests in lumbering and ice harvesting. He was a sawyer by trade and worked in the big lumber mills at Ruggles Hollow, Beth Run, Stull and Harvey's Lake. In those early days the care of the circular and band saws in the mills was specialized occupation, requiring the services of experts to keep them in shape. Mr. Biery studied the care of saws by correspondence during spare time and became an outstanding expert. With the depletion of the vast forests that stretched over the mountains of Luzerne, Sullivan and Wyoming counties he continued in his profession in the ice business spending a considerable part of his time during the ice harvest at Mountain Springs.

Big lumber mills in Maine learning of his ability sought his services and for a time he worked in the Pine Tree State. He received many offers from Southern lumber mills, but his first love was Pennsylvania and there he remained until his death.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the late home in Alderson with services in charge of Rev. John R. Albright of St. Luke's Lutheran Church of Noxen where Mr. Biery was a member. Interment was in the family plot in Woodlawn cemetery, Dallas.

Pallbearers were his brother, Fades Biery; his son, Otto A. Biery; his sons-in-law, A. D. Adams, and William H. Symon and his grandsons, Richard C. Adams and Robert K. Adams.

Beside his wife he leaves the following children: Mrs. William Symon, Otto A. Biery, Alderson; Mrs. Albert D. Adams, Plainfield, N. J., and his brother, F. S. Biery, Dallas.

Lehman Valedictorian Wins Digest Award

Harry Smith, R. D. 4, Dallas, valedictorian of the class of 1939 has been awarded the coveted Readers' Digest Award, according to announcement made this week by H. A. Snyder, supervising principal of Lehman Schools. The award is conferred as encouragement to young men and women throughout the nation who, by their scholastic achievements, give promise of growing into leadership in their communities.

fifty-four years of age. We do not know why he made this move; perhaps the pioneer spirit was still strong in him. A man whose ancestors' restlessness had brought them from England, and who himself left home behind him to find more space and freedom in which to raise his family, might not think it so strange that the urge for change should lead him to a still newer place in which to find his last resting place.

Take Squire To Task

Nobody minded much when Squire Norman Robbins of Pringle moved to Forty Fort, but when he moved to Pittston, councilmen decided he had gone too far. This afternoon proceedings quo warranto will be sworn out against Robbins at Luzerne County Court House to show cause why he holds office in one town and lives in another.

Outing Committees Meet this Afternoon

Committees for the 6th Annual Luzerne Day, town outing sponsored by the Luzerne Civic Association, meet at 4 this afternoon (Friday) with Squire Frank Shivy, association secretary and Herbert Hawke, general chairman, to make final reports.

A crowd of about 6,000 is expected to attend the huge outing, which will be held at Fernbrook Park on Wednesday, July 19. A varied sports program, baby and beauty contests, and other events will feature the afternoon, and a free dance, with music by Jack Melton's orchestra, will be held at the park in the evening.

Half-price bus fares and tickets to the dance are available in all Luzerne stores.

Among the latest entrants for the Luzerne-Fernbrook marathon race, which will begin the day's activities, are Lefty Martino, Gus Ottoviani, Lefty Bodgan and Harry Sweppeneiser of Dallas. Those wishing to compete may enter at Luzerne Hardware, Rahl's Market, Keystone Barber Shop or Squire Shivy's office.
