It is trite to say that books are like old friends, but it is also true. There is no place quite so friendly as our room at home. The glass-covered book case is far too small to hold the volumes which always await us there. From where we loiter by the window in a familiar, worn Morris chair we can see books in a row across a desk top, books stacked in a corner, books on shelves under end tables and on a typewriter desk, books scattered on a bedside table.

There is one book, though, which is missing. It has been some years since we realized that, and we've tried, quite often, to find it. Our search has been handicapped somewhat by the fact that we can't remember the name of the author. The title, we remember well, was "Sanford and Merton." It was, except for school textbooks, the first book we ever read.

How it came to us or what happened to it we don't know now. We can't even remember whether it was Sanford or Merton who was the hero. But we have a very clear picture of the heavy, blue binding, of the big type which made it easier when we had to stop and spell out a word laboriously, of the gaudy, full-color illustrations and, most of all, of us sprawled out on the floor, chin in hands, living through adventures with Sanford and Merton and learning that there was something more to printed words than merely chanting them in a school room.

Once or twice we've run across references to "Sanford and Merton." Apparently it was, 25 years ago, a favorite with youngsters who were cutting their literary teeth. We have written to booksellers and inquired at second-hand shops and enlisted volunteer scouts in our quest, but we have never encountered another volume of "Sanford and Merton."

When we go back to the cabin along Huntington Creek this week-end we shall be accompanied by a few more old friends, books which we shall re-read during the next month. Somehow, it would mean a great deal to us if we could take "Sanford and Merton" along, too. We wonder if it's hoping too much that someone who reads this may be able to tell us where we can find them.

Winter Denies He Is Nazi Agent

past three months I have delivered several addresses in defense of Americanism. I have never received a single penny from any foreign government or organization, and in this I invite investigation. The only organization in which I hold membership is the American Legion and I have never had any connection with any foreign-inspired organization. I have been sympathetic with Father Coughlin in his effort to arouse the American people to the menace of Communism.

Mr. Winter explained that for many years he has had corresponded with friends in England, France, Germany and Hungary and from time to time he receives literature from them. He said that when such literature smacks of propaganda he furnishes copies to the government and burns the rest. "I have," he said, "been sympathetic with every force in the world which is fighting the penetrating poison of Bolshevism, including General Franco, whose struggle in Spain saved the nation from Bolshevik tyranny and helped in the preservation of Christian civilization."

Mr. Winter served for 28 months with the army during the World War.

Two Democratic, Three Republican Slates Take Form In County Election

Swarm Of G. O. P. Independents Base Hopes On Possibility Of Slipping Through Factional Gaps

The toughest job confronting political analysts this week was the task of sorting the flock of aspirants for county offices into their proper groups.

There are two kinds of candidates in the campaign which opened formally last Friday—"slated" candidates, who have been promised support of influential Republican or Democratic cliques, and "independent" candidates, who base their hopes on the possibility that they can slip into a nomination through the gaps caused by factional disputes.

The arrangements of candidates by slates has changed almost daily and it is likely that there will be more shifting before the battle lines are finally drawn. Any compilation of candidates by slates must, of course, necessitate a good bit of guesswork but, lacking the confirmation of the candidates themselves, the following arrangement, by one of the county's most astute political observers, is about as near to being right as is possible now.

There are, according to this observer's analysis, two Democratic slates and 14 Independent Democrats. The Republicans now have three slates and about 40 Independents.

The "Valentine-Pinola" Republican slate is made up of the following candidates: Judge W. A. Valentine, Wilkes-Barre; Frank Pinola, Kingston; commissioners, Peter E. Turek and William T. Jones; coronor, Ken R. Williams; district attorney, Frank P. Slatery; sheriff, Dallas Schober; register of will, Joseph Morris; recorder, Catherine Jones, Plains; treasurer, Peter D. Clark.

On the "Valentine-Fine Slate" are: Sheriff, Ken Guest; judges, John S. Fine, W. A. Valentine; register, Catherine Jones; commissioners, John A. MacGuffie, John Shively; recorder of deeds, C. J. Bufalino; coronor, I. C. Morgan; district attorney, Peter A. Kanjorski; treasurer, John B. Wallis.

The "James Slate", according to this observer, will have as its candidates: Judges, W. A. Valentine, Frank Pinola; commissioners, Jonathan R. Davis, Ralph S. Morris; district attorney, John Hessel; sheriff, Sydney Pattison; recorder, John Shively; register, John J. Hibbard; treasurer, Elmer E. Shard or Peter D. Clark.

At present all other candidates for the Republican nomination are recognized by most observers as "independents." The Democratic organization in the county is expected to endorse a slate which will include the following: Judges, M. F. McDonald and John H. Bonin; district attorney, E. F. McGovern; commissioners, John A. Riley, Stanley Janoski; treasurer, John Kridlo; coronor, Stan M. Leonard; sheriff, G. Lester Thomas; recorder, Joseph Biologowicz; register, Ralph Gitz.

A group of candidates known as the "Aponick-Bierly Slate" has bolted the Democratic organization group and is expected to present the following slate: Judges, William A. Pace, M. A. Tolinski; district attorney, Arthur A. Maguire; commissioners, T. J. Puhlick, James P. Brislin; sheriff, J. L. Martin; recorder, Charles Malpass; register, Andrew Fierro.

There are 14 so-called "Independents" who, so far, have not been included on any slate.

Extreme danger of forest fires still exists. Yesterday's rainfall relieved the seriousness of the situation, but the earth is still dry and fires can burn deeply into the baked roots, shouldering in defiance of the efforts of fire fighters. Wide-spread blazes again this week caused the Department of Forests and Waters to send additional men into this section to support crews which have been laboring for weeks.

Lord, of your mercy the least Beg we; oh, say not in vain. Please, both for man and for beast Fling us a skyfull of rain. For today, the U. S. Weather Bureau at Scranton again predicts scattered thunder showers.
