front of the cabin and later there was the trip to the mail box along the highway, a quarter of a mile away, and wood to be chopped and chores to be done and another, less spectacular sunset, and one more day, blessed by peace, gay with the life of the woods, dripping with sunshine, unmarred by a single visitation from the outside world.

We know now that we shall remember that day as long as we remember the blood-red sunset. When it ended, it was a day with all the others, but on the next morning it became a day set aside to be remembered above the others. For on the next morning breakfast was interrupted by the sound of an automobile, grinding its way over the rough ruts toward the meadows above. We hurried up, preceded

ROYAL WHISPERING

Newspaper men who covered the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England to the New York World's Fair are still wondering what the King said to his consort out of the corner of his mouth while he stood at attention during the playing of the two National Anthems in the Court of Peace. There wasn't a lip reader in the hundreds of reporters and photographers on the job.

Miss Gosart Given Democratic Nomination

Although she lost her campaign for the Republican nomination for school director in Lake Township, Miss Louella Gosart received the Democratic nomination when her name was written in.

"This puts me in a funny predicament," said Miss Gosart, a tax clerk in the County Commissioners' office and president of the Republican Club of Lake Township. "I've never been a Democrat. However, if the citizens saw fit to nominate me, I'll stand for election in November."

by Duke, and greeted the friend who got out of the car and came toward us.

As we walked back we laughed at Duke, who was prancing and playing, as he always did when company arrived. We reached the cabin and we unfolded an extra chair for the company. He sat down.

"When did you have your last visitor?" he asked.

"We thought back. It was three or maybe four days, we recalled. "Then," our friend said, "you don't know that the war is on."

A chill wind sprang up somewhere, and was gone. Our throat tightened. We remembered the blood-red sunset. We remembered the sunny, quiet day. "When did it start?"

"Early yesterday morning," our friend answered, gravely. "Hitler ordered his troops across the Polish frontier. Warsaw has been bombed. I thought you'd like to know."

The peace had ended. For us, it had lasted 24 hours longer than for most of the world. A squirrel scampered overhead, carrying more nuts to its winter cache. By the streams' edge a pinched flower, cold and bedraggled, hurt by the first light frost, warmed itself in the sun. A leaf shivered and broke away from its limb and floated lightly to the sand. Our friend laid a newspaper on the desk under the trees and a few brown pine needles sprinkled across the black headlines. It was the end of summer.

There was a bright, cold moon again that night when we walked outside for a last cigarette. The lonely little cabin, nestled under the stout hemlocks, looked wistful and cozy and snug. But it was different now. Far to the east tense men were marching and anguished men and women and children were dying. A million people were hunched over loud-speakers, absorbing bulletins from New York and London and Paris and Berlin. Nerves were jumpy, hearts beat faster, tongues wagged incessantly. At last there was war. And this bright moon shone tonight on fear-filled cities, blackened to hide from the death that would come riding the clouds.

There was a rustle in the brush. Duke barked fiercely and hurled himself toward it. We called him back and rumbled the thick hair back of his ears. Our cigarette made a long, bright arc and hissed as it fell in the water.

"Let's go home, Duke," we said.

Nuss, Kent And Ehret Victors In Lehman

The Republican nominees for school board in Lehman Township in November will be Charles Nuss and Ed Kent for the six-year term, and Arthur Ehret for the two-year term. W. H. Crosby, incumbent, and J. Milton Cup were defeated. Fred Elston won the G. O. P. nomination for supervisor, defeating George Bond. The Republican nomination for constable went to Joe E. Ide, who defeated Raymond Marsh and Lee Wentzel.

He Lost; But He Won

George W. Williams of Dallas, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner, polled 8,749 votes, running third among the 11 aspirants. But someone in Dallas Borough wrote in Mr. Williams' name, nominating him for auditor on the Democratic ticket, so he will be on the General Election ballot anyway.

year—changed very little. But that war came as a surprise and housewives had no knowledge of war's effect on prices. This month, housewives remembered the "high cost of living" during the last days of the World War and, in their hurry to stock up, brought about just such a condition as they were hoping to escape.

THANKS—

I want to thank all the men and women of Kingston Township who gave me such a nice vote for the office of Constable of Kingston Township on Tuesday. I will endeavor to justify the confidence you have placed in me.
