$49,000 Lopped From County's Tax Revenues

The Personal Property Department at Luzerne County Court House is this week writing off $49,000 in county taxes, and an equal amount will be written off by the State, on twelve and one-quarter million dollars worth of Woolworth stock owned by resident of Luzerne County. Until decision was rendered in Luzerne County courts this year this large amount of tax was collected annually from persons owning Woolworth stock in this county.

Grangers Want Deer Damages

Policies Are Adopted At Annual Convention

The state would pay for crop damage caused by deer and bear if a resolution adopted by the Pennsylvania State Grange at its annual convention in Chambersburg last week is successful.

In many sections of Pennsylvania, Luzerne County included, deer are seriously damaging winter grain, buckwheat and gardens. Other resolutions adopted:

Advocated an increase in the amount the State pays to districts for State-owned land in those districts.

Urged "strong measures" to control the use and growth of marijuana.

Urged a constitutional amendment requiring payment of taxes as a qualification for voting.

Opposed the Teacher Tenure law prohibiting dismissal of teachers except for cause, with a plea that more authority be given the local school boards.

Advocated an amendment to the Wagner Labor Relations Act so that agriculture may benefit by exemptions.

Expressed fear individual liberty might be diminished under a centralized government.

Favored graduated income tax.

A report of the educational committee attributed rural opposition to taprooms to inadequate police protection of those districts. The same committee opposed "socialized medicine" and urged "voluntary group co-operative plans."

Approving the report of Secretary Miles Horst, the Grange opposed compulsory price fixing of farm products without the consent of the producer.

Duplication of government services was "deplored" with the suggestion that mergers might eliminate confusion.

Happy New Year Mr. Scarecrow

A Happy New Year to you, Mr. Scarecrow! Maybe you won't be with us much longer, but it's been nice having you here during the Throbbing Thirties. It wasn't so pleasant at first. Back there in 1930 we really believed you were a fierce fellow. You were a constant companion, a symbol of all the fear and anxiety that were stifling business. We shivered along with everybody else, until we discovered you were just a battered hat, a torn suit and a rickety wooden frame. After that we rolled up our sleeves and called your bluff. You've had a fast ride since then. Sometimes, when advertisers were increasing their space and circulation was climbing and new equipment was replacing antiques and praise was coming fast we almost forgot about you. But you were always there, still trying to frighten us into retreat. Actually, we became fond of you. The last 10 years would have been less fun if you hadn't been hovering around, trying to make it tougher. Now Mr. Babson says we're all headed for good times. We'll miss your fierce old phiz around the place, trying to scare us. We've learned a lot, fighting you, and we're better people, we think, because we wrestled with fear. It's a new decade now, and maybe those lessons will bring even greater progress than in the last 10 years. Anyway, Mr. Scarecrow, there's no hard feelings. Come back any time. We don't frighten so easily now. We've got a real, friendly feeling for you, you old scamp. Happy New Year, Mr. Scarecrow!
