Rationed Food No Hardship Yet, Britisher Says

Post's Correspondent Finds His Half-Pound Of Butter Sufficient

but now the days when that liberty was enjoyed as a matter of course seem very dim and distant.

Note the least effect of rationing is the abundant proof of the contention that you have only to put something out of reach in order to make everyone want it.

We will take sugar, for instance. If you want to make marmalade you may get a permit, by showing the invoice for oranges you have bought, which enables you to buy three pounds of sugar for each pound of oranges.

The Food Control Officers have been astounded by the number of housewives who seem to have a passion for marmalade just now. Marmalade-making would look like a national sport. Some suspicious Food Control Officers see in it a liking for extra sugar, rather than for marmalade!

However, so far we cannot grumble, though, naturally, most of us do. I have the dubious advantage of remembering the rationing in the last war. You might say I was reared on a ration-card, for I was at school at the time and not only helped to write the names and addresses on them as part of my war effort, but did a great deal of the family shopping with them.

I remember very vividly spending whole mornings standing in queues in various parts of Reading. First, we would find a shop where they were queuing for butter; then a rumour would spread that a shop about a mile away had been lucky enough to get a bit of tea and off we would trot to the tea queue. I remember days when, having returned home with a little butter, I thought there could be no greater achievement open to man—or, as it happened, boy.

I remember the bread that was like sawdust and the artichokes that we had, when we could get them, instead of potatoes, and the saccharine we had instead of sugar and all the other 'instead of's' of that time. Believe me, we old campaigners are not complaining as yet.

Students Will Tag Girls With Poor Posture

February 19-23 is being observed as Posture Week at College Misericordia and is under the auspices of the Women's Athletic Association. Miss Mary Helen Belina, a sophomore, has been chosen leader for the event which has as its objective the improving of posture among college students by making them "posture conscious."

Posters illustrating good and bad posture are displayed throughout the college. A posture limerick contest is in progress. The contest, which closes today, will be judged by the W. A. A. officers, Miss Margaret Smith, Wilkes-Barre, Miss Dorothy Watkins, Wilkes-Barre, Miss Marjorie Brenner, Wilkes-Barre and Miss Mary Keightly of Pittston.

On posture tag day, a colored ribbon will be tied on the finger of every girl whose posture is poor.

License Restored To Man Who Figured In Fatality

The license of Stanley Hilstolsky of Wyoming R. D., who was driving the motorcycle on which David Mahler was riding when he was killed on the Luzerne-Harvey's Lake highway last July, was restored by Judge John J. Aponick this week.

David and his brother, Paul, both of Orange, were passengers on Hilstolsky's motorcycle when it skidded. David was killed and Paul was seriously injured. In November Hilstolsky's license was suspended.

"To penalize an operate because he was unfortunate enough to be involved in a fatal accident, through no fault of his own would work a great injustice," Judge Aponick ruled. "Although three persons were riding on the motorcycle, which was built for two, there is absolutely no evidence that this fact was a contributing cause of the accident. The mere fact that the motorcycle skidded does not itself constitute evidence of negligence upon the operator's part."

"A SNOWY RHYME"
65 shovels resting on 4th floor, 300 feet of truck chain by the back door.
It snowed all day Wednesday; everybody swore;
We sold out shovels and truck chains—wished for some more.

Don Robinson at Russell Hill and John Parys of Laceyville were among Harry's customers for special made heavy truck chains. Bruce set a new mark for sales of snow shovels Thursday with a record of 42.

Have you seen the Kitchen Wall Cabinets on our first floor? They're mighty nice, and reasonable, too. Lee Giberson is installing them and a bathroom, too, for Windsor Ferguson at Osterhout. Another set with sink and inlaid linoleum is being put in for Miss Nora Bond at Factoryville.

Barney says, "Our $2.00 oil and repair job does your harness $10.00 worth of good." He recently oiled and repaired sets for L. H. Williams, Smith Johnson and Jim Dixon. Harold Pierson bought a new team harness for his farm at Trucksville.

Our first floor is being changed and painted with that good Moore's paint in preparation for our Spring Party, March 28 and 29. We hope you'll like the changes. Notice, as you look around, that our Spring merchandise is selling at the same low prices as last year.
