Suffolk, Va., (By airmail)-The song was wrong, all wrong. Remember it? It said:

"Nothin' could be fine-a than to be in Carolina in the mornin!

Come a few miles north and take a look at Suffolk, Virginia. See it, feel it, smell it, breathe it. And don't be at all surprised if you suddenly are aware of the nostalgic urge to think of Luzerne County and Wyoming Valley, because very much of anthracite inspiration has found its fulfillment in this capital city of the lowly goober, this greatest peanut market in all the world. You'll forget for the time being that bituminous is burned here. How, could it be otherwise with West Virginia so near-and paying dividends to some of your neighbors, too.

Suffolk is the home of T. Cover Johnson, Marion Saunders, Jack Nurney, Amedeo Obici, Planters' Nut & Chocolate Company and (temporarily, of course) Wilkes-Barre Barons of the Eastern Professional

Baseball League. Johnson is Mister Big at the Chamber of Commerce, Saunders equally important in the sanctum sanctorum of the News-Herald, Nurney is only the Mayor. And what of Obici? All he and the Planters' company contribute is about 68 percent of Suffolk's employment and somewhere near to 100 percent of the self-sufficiency of Wilkes-Barreans who had the good sense to buy Planters' stock when news about the Barons, for which purpose your correspondent did indeed come, and first thing you know Suffolk is 78 degrees in the shade, and its possibilities 100 percent on your mind. You wonder if there isn't something about peanuts that is more devastating than that tidal surge of Sherman on his way to Atlanta in the war and to immortality in the hell-and-gone novel of Margaret Mitchell. Then you look over the gigantic Planters' plant with its thousands of employes and its billions of peanuts and you know that A. Obici built for peace and Suffolk is its embodiment.

Obici almost had to give it away. You come down here to write

Merchants' League Ends Its Regular Season

1940 season last week, statistics show that Joe Schwab bowled every game of the schedule and finished with an average of 192.

John Mellus holds league high average with 200 but did not participate in all games. Starting last Wednesday, the teams which comprised the Merchants' went into a new nine-week schedule to end May 29 with a new prize list which will give all teams another chance to win prizes.
