Sordoni, president of the Commonwealth Telephone Company, which serves Dallas, has purchased that part of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's New York-Buffalo toll line between Scranton and Towanda. vote the way he promises. It ain't safe. Maybe the guy's dishonest. Who's gonna know what he's doin' back of those curtains? Under these circumstances a coupla bucks are plenty, believe me.

"What's the most an election ever cost you—in the old days, when prices were high?" Our friend, the Ward Heeler, wrinkled his brow and sucked a tooth, invariable accompaniment to his serious thinking. "Well," he recalled, "one time we spent 1000 bucks in our ward. 'Of course that was a close election and it was a long time ago, when people wanted somethin' besides peanuts for their votes. That was a very tough year. We only won by eight votes."

"Don't people ever get smart and hold you up for more money?" "Yeah," he drawled, disgustedly. "Like that big family of furniers; We even helped the old man get his citizenship papers. Now he makes his whole family stay home on election day. About 6, if it's close, they know both sides is gonna be knockin' on the door. So we'll say it's close. And they begin dickerin'. Well, a family like that in human nature. It's downright dishonesty." He shook his head sorrowfully.

"Mac," we said, slapping mustard on our cheese sandwich, "you're a blot on the face of democracy."

He grinned. "Aw," he protested. "You just don't understand. Somebody's gotta run elections, ain't they? The voters won't. Half of them vote for a guy because they like his picher in the paper. The other half get so flustered when they get inside those curtains they can't even remember how they did vote. We just make it scientific like. We got organization, so the voters won't pick the wrong guys by mistake."

Just then a tottering figure, navigating with the help of a stout cane, hove into view. Our friend, the Ward Heeler, beamed and hailed the gaunt spectre noisily. The old man's response was muffled in his long, white beard as he shuffled past.

"Who," we inquired, impressed, "is that rickety character?" "He's one of our boys," our companion replied, glancing after the frail oldster respectfully. "That," he added, "is the President of the Young Demublicans."

Merchants Will Close Wednesday

Seven Firms Agree To Plan For Half-Holiday

Seven business firms in Dallas agreed yesterday to co-operate with the generally-observed custom of closing Wednesday afternoon. The policy will go into effect next Wednesday, May 1. The above will close at 1 p. m.

A spokesman for the merchants pointed out that the plan of closing Wednesday afternoon is now observed throughout the country, as a move to give employees a deserved mid-week holiday. He pointed out that practice has shown the custom puts patrons to no inconvenience because there is ample time for shopping throughout the rest of the week.

The firms which are co-operating are the A. & P., the Acme, Richards' Economy Market, Titan's Cash Market, Dallas 5c and 10c Store, Schmeier's Economy Store and the Lady's Dress Shop.

They've Given Up

The thrifty Philadelphia Board of Education has ordered that no more maps of Europe shall be purchased until the end of the European War, because the school district has been able to buy maps fast enough to keep pace with changing borders lately.

Staff Of Home Economists To Preside At Four Cooking Schools Next Month

A series of four cooking schools will be held at Kingston Township and Dallas Borough high school auditoriums next month, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Lake, noted home economist, according to an announcement yesterday by Luzerne County Gas & Electric Corp., which will sponsor the schools.

Miss Lake, who is associated with the Westinghouse Company, will be assisted by Mrs. Bertha Phillips Howe, who is widely known throughout this section for her helpful advice to housewives. Miss Irene Messinger and Mrs. Isabel Reynolds will assist Miss Lake and Miss Howe.

The schedule of sessions follows: Tuesday, May 7, 2 p. m., Dallas Borough High School; Wednesday, May 8, 7:30 p. m., Dallas Borough High School; Thursday, May 9, 2 p. m., Kingston Township High School; Friday, May 10, 7:30, Kingston Township High School.

New recipes will be tested on the stage and interesting demonstrations of modern equipment will be given. There will be several handsome prizes awarded to those attending and a number of other attractive features are being planned to make the schools interesting and helpful to housewives and home economics students.

Turpin Led Opponent In Sixth District

Dr. C. Murray Turpin led his opponent, J. Henry Pool, by nearly 2,000 votes in the Sixth Legislative District on Tuesday but the lead here and in the First and Seventh Districts was not enough to overcome Mr. Poole's majority in other parts of the county.

Outright opposition to the so-called "organization" candidates was also reflected in the Sixth Legislative District in the impressive support given John B. Wallis, Jr., GOP Independent. Although he trailed Percy A. Brown in this district, Mr. Wallis received a decisive majority over the other slated candidate, Andrew Hourigan.

In Luzerne Borough, the Clark forces won in all four wards. William Hawk had no opposition, James Graham defeated Jason Lord and Charles Strickland, Freas Hoffman defeated Day Thomas and Frank Groschel defeated Merle Pope and Thomas Goodman. Meredith Phillips, another Clark committeeman, won in Courtdale, defeating John Frolick.
