forced to go to war against her will; that Otto von Hapsburg is a "clown prince" and that a photograph circulated by the British purporting to show a ruined Catholic church in Lodz, Poland, is a lie because there wasn't any church in Lodz, so there.

If the United States were fascist, Germany wouldn't be so interested in you, as a reader or as a citizen. If the United States were fascist, Germany would play ball with the government, not you people, and the government would tell us what to print and it would be a great deal simpler for Germany. As it is, Germany has to worry about 130,000,000 people, instead of just one American dictator and his handful of henchmen.

We mention "Facts in Review", not because it is any worse than some of the stuff our friends, the local politicians, occasionally try to smuggle into our columns by one ruse or another, but because this 16-page magazine, bearing on its cover a huge portrait of Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, is typical of the stuff that is being stopped at the desks of American editors, who are this country's first line of defense against propaganda and, perhaps, war.

It isn't that editors are smarter than anyone else. Our own accumulated wrong guesses make an embarrassing total. It's just that one of the qualifications of being an editor is the ability to detect the fishy smell which surrounds free publicity. After a few years' experience, a newspaperman acquires an allergy for phony stories, or else he becomes a publicity man himself and gets rich writing pieces which his former fellow workers keep chucking in the waste basket.

We wouldn't pretend that we don't give you propaganda once in a while. Every editorial we write is propaganda for something. Joel Serra on Page 3 is a propagandist of the first water. Most of our columnists, this one not excluded, have pet peeves and causes. It's difficult, you'll admit, to refuse a free puff once in a while to a good advertiser to whose loyalty we owe the very shirt on our back. We're as human as you are, and the best we can do is guarantee that we won't let anything harmful to your fundamental welfare creep into our paper as news. Sometimes we think we do a little better there than some of our larger, metropolitan brothers.

But if a smidgeon of propaganda for one cause or another gets into The Post sometimes that doesn't worry us. You see, there are about 15,000 daily, Sunday, weekly and semi-weekly newspapers in the United States, their editorial pages reflecting every shade of political opinion from Soviet communism to pious capitalism.

Obviously, most of these newspapers are patriotic defenders of their own version of the American way of life. Since newspapers are seldom more or less than mirrors of public opinion, it is natural that they should, in a capitalistic democracy, be capitalistic and democratic. It could scarcely be anything else. Aside, however, from this general defense of the status quo, American newspapers present a bewildering array of editorial opinion, a freedom of expression in sharp contrast to the situation in most totalitarian nations.

Admittedly, American newspapers have their faults, and serious ones, many of them arising from abuse of the unique freedom they enjoy, but they are the most unexpressed newspapers left in the world. Censorship abroad may postpone some disclosure, bad guesses or biased interpretation may mislead readers for a while, selfish publishers may cloud significant issues temporarily, advertisers may padlock opinion on this newspaper or that one, but sooner or later, in the glorious rough-and-tumble of democratic journalism, the truth will out somewhere.

It may come in the communist Daily Worker, the socialist Daily People, the reactionary Herald Tribune, the staid Christian Science Monitor, the impressive New York Times, the New Dealish Philadelphia Record or the eight-page Dallas Post. The important thing is that in the United States those who wish to know the truth can find it if they search.

Lake Accident Case Settled Out Of Court

The lawsuit of Herman Fried of Larksville against Joseph Edward and Leo Blazewski of Crystal Bottling Co., to recover damages for injuries suffered when hit by a truck of the defendants at Harvey's Lake in June, 1933, was continued for settlement this week.

The trial began Monday. On Tuesday, a juror was withdrawn and Judge Thomas F. Farrel continued the case, the supposition being that there would be an attempt at settlement out of court. Fried said he was hit by the Crystal Bottling Co. truck while standing in front of the Casino, Harvey's Lake.

Storefront Repainted

The front of the Tally Ho Grille in the Devens building on Main Street, Dallas, was repainted this week in black and silver, making an unusually attractive appearance.

FAMOUS VIOLINIST AIDS CRIPPLED CHILDREN

To raise money for its work among crippled children, Wilkes-Barre Kiwanis Club will sponsor a concert by Rubino, famous violinist, in Meyers' High School, Wilkes-Barre, at 8:30 next Wednesday night. Among the compositions on his program, Rubino will play his new arrangement of George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue".

Miss Lake Will Conduct Classes For Housewives Four Days Next Week

Miss Elizabeth Lake, widely-known home economist, will appear in person at a series of four cooking schools to be held at Kingston Township and Dallas Borough high school auditoriums next week by Luzerne County Gas & Electric Corp.

Miss Lake, who is associated with the Westinghouse Company, will be assisted by Mrs. Bertha Phillips Howe. Miss Irene Messenger and Mrs. Isabel Reynolds will assist Miss Lake and Miss Howe.

The schedule of sessions follows: Tuesday, May 7, 2 p. m., Dallas Borough High School; Wednesday, May 8, 7:30 p. m., Dallas Borough High School; Thursday, May 9, 2 p. m., Kingston Township High School; Friday, May 10, 7:30, Kingston Township High School.

New recipes will be tested on the stage and interesting demonstrations of modern equipment will be given. There will be several handsome prizes awarded to those attending and a number of other attractive features are being planned to make the schools interesting and helpful to housewives and home economics students.

Unlicensed Milk Dealers Can Be Fined $300

Milk dealers in this section were warned by the Pennsylvania Milk Control Commission yesterday that the deadline on dealers' licenses was May 1 and that dealers who have not applied will be subject to prosecution in the current drive against dairies operating illegally.

Under the Milk Control Law, the penalty for operating without a license is a minimum fine of $25 and a maximum of $300. In cases where license applications have not been filed but all requirements have not been met, the Commission will grant additional time for dealers to qualify.

Noxen Girls Are Given Audition By Major Bowes

Ruth Hackling, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hackling of Noxen, left Wednesday for New York City to appear before Major Bowes for a radio audition. Miss Hackling will sing for the jovial Major, in an effort to secure a spot on his program. Her sister, Leah, a dancer, also was to have a try-out.

Jacob Klimeck, Mrs. Nelson Harris, Mrs. Phillip Ellsworth, Mrs. Oliver Ellsworth, Mrs. Anna Weaver, Mrs. William Brace, Mrs. Gideon Miller, Mrs. Harold Smith, Mrs. Palmer Uppdyke, Mrs. Victor Rydd, Miss Frances Hess, Miss Gertrude Smith, Mrs. Morgan of Alderson and the hostesses, Mrs. Olin Kunkle, Mrs. Guy Rothery, Mrs. Ralph Hess and Mrs. Stanley Elston.
