'Cloudy With Showers' Is New Play At Nuangola

A new play, "Cloudy with Showers" appears to have gained the reputation of being the most laugh-provoking play produced in New York in several seasons, and for that reason has been selected by the management of the Grove Theatre players for presentation during the week of August 12th to 17th.

"Cloudy with Showers" is from the pen of Floyd Dell, a well-known novelist, and Thomas Mitchell, a well-known actor. It has to do with a young college professor, recipient of an international prize for his treatise on the morals of the modern world, who is goaded by his brightest pupil into taking her for a sly auto ride only a few hours before he must exhibit himself at a stately banquet and over the radio. The professor with the girl go on that ride. Through thunder and rain they go, into a ditch, into a nearby roadhouse for shelter, into a sleeping apartment, equipped with romantic firelight, champagne . . . and also in one of those nests of gang men and State police which frequently provide twists in plots and throw thrills into comedy.

Revived Army Has Small Units, Geared For Speed

The job facing the nation today is to provide adequate manufacturing facilities to supply those weapons for the existing divisions as rapidly as possible and to deliver them to the new divisions as fast as they are ready for them. That calls for special steels for the gun barrels. It calls for machines that can convert that steel into weapons. And it calls for men who can operate those machines. The Army knows its needs. It is the job of the National Defense Advisory Commission to find out how to fulfill those requirements without crowding and confusion. But that list above is only what a modern infantry regiment can more or less carry over its shoulder in the way of weapons.

There are also fast modern tanks which carry substantial armor and machine guns. We will have small ones capable of galloping over good roads at thirty-six miles an hour, and moving over rough ground at a good clip. And there will be big ones capable of slugging it out with anything that comes along. Under new contracts, these steel turtles are being turned out in the middle west. The steel industry has already told the Advisory Commission that preparations are under way to increase production of light armor plate to meet requirements.

Ammunition Needs

That more or less settles the weapons that the infantry has handy. But these modern, agile, war machines can dispose of a surprising quantity of ammunition in a short time. For example, the M1 rifle, with a good man on the trigger end can fire over 130 shots in five minutes. A machine gun can loose about 2,500 shots in the direction of the enemy in the same time. So it is evident that there will have to be considerable expansion of the nation's ammunition facilities in a hurry. And, this in turn, will call for more powder plants, and stepping up of production of brass shell cases, and steel-jackets. All this has to be done without creating bottle-necks, without waste motion.

the showing. Seventy-five more 1941 Hudsons are expected this week by the Oliver organization. These will be distributed to dealers throughout the territory to be followed immediately by more which will soon be in the hands of users.

"Hudson is the first manufacturer to be out with 1941 cars," Mr. Oliver says, "because sales during the past year far exceeded anything the company had planned on. Before the 1940 season was well along Hudson executives were aware that their stocks of materials for the 1940 car would be exhausted early and plans and work on the 1941 model started immediately."

I get over there?" we asked. "Only way is across them planks," he said, waving his cornob pipe at the slippery lumber. So we breathed a short prayer and inched slowly along the disjointed trail of planks.

The bone was inside the shack, and at first sight we had to admit it was a mighty big bone. It stood about three feet high and it had knobs on both ends. The excavators had dug it out of a bed of quicksand about 30 feet under the surface that afternoon. It certainly looked like a mastodon bone, but nobody had identified it yet, and we didn't want to write the story and then have somebody prove next day that it was just the hind leg of a jackass so we told the watchman we were from the government and not to let anybody see the bone until we came back.

THE PROBLEM then was to find somebody who could identify a mastodon's skeleton. We settled down for a session in a pay station and began calling all the librarians, biology teachers and learned scholars we could think of and the trail led finally to an instructor in a reputable local institution of learning. We got him to the phone just as he was taking it on the lam for the annual senior ball. He would be glad to come over the next day, he said.

We don't recall now what argument it was we used to lure him away from his social duty to come over and identify our mastodon's leg immediately. We can only remember the sinking feeling we had when he stepped out of his car attired in spottish white flannels. We closed our eyes in horror at the thought of him crossing the muddy flat to the watchman's sanctuary. He was a little frigid because we'd yanked him away from the ball, but quite civilized and we explained, with a forced laugh, that the rickety planks were really a lot safer than they looked. He peered at them dubiously over his glasses and then, before he could flee, we pushed off, waving to him to follow.

We were half-way across and going quite well when we heard a grunt, followed by a sucking noise and an emphatic expression of pedagogic wrath behind us, and when we turned it was to see our professor pulling one white-clad leg out of the soupy mud. He had, it seemed, slipped.

"No use stopping now," we said, and hurried across the remaining planks, well out of reach of the muddy professor.

When he saw the big bone his eyes lit up and he forgot about his ruined flannels. He was sure it was a mastodon thigh bone, about 250,000 years old, and probably washed down from New York State in quicksand. Fortunately, he said, there was an eminent archeologist speaking at a city hotel that very evening and he could confirm the identification if we were still skeptical.

We thanked the professor and he left and we told the watchman we had arranged to borrow the bone to take a picture of it. It made quite a good-siden burden, and people turned to watch us, all the way around Public Square and as we walked through the lobby of the hotel.

"Check this while we go in here and see a fellow," we told the girl at the cloakroom, depositing the three-foot bone on top of a natty fedora. "Cheez!" she said, her eyes popping. "Whazitit?"

"Just something for my dog!" we said, and went in and got the archeologist, who not only agreed that was a mastodon's leg bone but tried to coax it away from us. So we carried it back to the news room and stood it up beside the desk while we wrote the story.

When we went home at midnight we entrusted the bone to a friend who, we heard later, lost it playing blackjack with the printers in the women's rest room about dawn. It didn't matter, anyway, because when we came to work the next afternoon they told us the P. P. and L. had sent for the bone and raised cane with the reporter who'd stolen it.

For a while the light company had it in the window and a few people stopped to look at it and after that, we heard, they gave it to Wyoming Historical and Geological Society. Then we lost track of it. It was a mighty fine mastodon's leg, though, and after all the trouble we took we thought the least they could do would be to let us keep it.

Jim Oliver Host At Hudson Party

1940 Models Shown At Country Club Meeting

One hundred Hudson dealers and their representatives from 15 North-eastern and Central Pennsylvania counties were the guests of James R. Oliver, Hudson distributor, at a preview showing of 1941 Hudson cars at Irem Temple Country Club on Wednesday. Factory representatives, carrier representatives and others in allied trades were also the guests of Mr. Oliver.

The new Symphonic Styled Hudsons, first of the automobile industry's new model offerings, began rolling off the assembly line several weeks ago at the company's huge Detroit plant, after many months of preparation involving important chassis changes and an advanced style design. Public announcement of the cars will follow in a few weeks.

The dealers were enthusiastic over the striking new body styling and longer wheelbases and the extensive list of improvements and refinements offered in the three new 1941 Hudson models. Spotlights were the advanced development in color harmony appearing for the first time in a full line of cars in standard production.

The new development termed "Symphonic Styling" offers a wide selection of interior color combinations which harmonize with exterior colors. Carpets, floor mats, interior trim and upholstery harmonize with exterior colors and tones. For example, a green Hudson exterior is matched with an entire green ensemble of interior trim. This is entirely new in motor cars and is an application of the same harmonious color trends observed in well-planned home furnishings and ensembles in women's apparel.

Eight of these new Hudsons, out of 20 recently received by Mr. Oliver, were on display in the Country Club pavilion where lectures on factory production, merchandising, dealer organization and other kindred subjects were given by factory experts after an address of welcome and introductory remarks by Mr. Oliver. William Baker, director of sales; F. C. Hammond, regional manager, and Byron Luce, wholesale manager,

Overbrook Club Invites Public To Event Sunday

Herbert Hardy, president of Wyoming Valley Flying Club, will give a flying demonstration above the Kozemchak Farm on Sunday afternoon at 1 during the last summer trap shoot of the Overbrook Gun Club.

The public is invited to attend the shoot and make an all day affair of it. There will be a convenient spot on the farm, away from the shooting grounds, set aside for those who take picnic lunches and there will be no charge for parking.

Experienced shooters and beginners are invited. Everyone who wishes to learn to handle a gun safely and learn to shoot will have a man to coach him. Women also are invited. There will be extra guns for those who have none. Shells will be furnished on the grounds.

A fox gun will be awarded and three prizes will be given to the highest scorers in each class. The shooting grounds are on the Fernbrook-Huntsville Road.

discussed the 1941 models in detail. Formal features of the meeting were followed by a dinner at the club, informal dealer get-together and sports and entertainment in the afternoon on the club grounds. Leslie Warhola's orchestra furnished music.

In discussing the 1941 Hudson, Mr. Oliver said, "For honest value there isn't a car on the market that can touch the Hudson in its three price classes. All I ask is comparison. Let any man take one of these Hudsons and drive it for a day instead of his own car, over the same routes he drives daily, and I'll wager he'll choose the Hudson for his next automobile."

Proof of dealer acceptance came Wednesday night when men from Stroudsburg, Bloomsburg, Williamsport, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Pottsville and distant points drove home in 1941 models. Only one of the many 1941 models remained for display in Dallas at the conclusion of

Kozemchak Produces Fine Raspberry Crop

One of the finest crops of red raspberries harvested this year in this vicinity was that of the Department of Agriculture inspected berries on the Kozemchak farm, Overbrook Avenue, Dallas. The crop was abundant, exceeding all expectations and the berries were large and luscious. Early Thursday morning Mr. Kozemchak called The Post to say that the entire crop had been sold and asked that his classified ad in The Post be discontinued. "I was amazed," he said "with the results from that ad. Dozens of people mentioned it. It was the only advertising we used in any newspaper and it kept a steady flow of customers coming to our place for berries every day."
