Editorially Speaking:

A Dedication

A year ago, in a time far less critical than this, when the warring countries of Europe were still an ominous rumble on the distant horizon rather than a black thunderhead close upon the borders of this nation, the editor of The Post wrote these words:

'Our task is to catch the flaming torch which France tossed from failing hands-and to keep it burning brightly for the generation which will come after us. Our duty is not one of fighting, but of building.

"For those of us who live here in Dallas and vicinity the assignment is to practice and preserve democracy in our own communities, to keep building for future generations which will be proud because we kept our vision clear, our purpose steadfast when our institutions seemed threatened

This dedication is even more poignant now than it was in 1940, re-introduced in a day when these United States are poined on the brink of the bloody maelstrom which has engulfed the world.

Far too easy is the tendency for a people under the stress of war to lose their hold on the very institutions they are striving to protect, to lose sight of principles and goals in the excitement and hysteria of emergency.

If this nation is plunged into war, a possibility which daily becomes more imminent, it is the duty of all of us... to maintain an equilibrium of living, to keep constant the forward progress of America even while her very existence as a democratic nation is jeopardized. A steadfast basis is perhaps the greatest requisite for a victorious battle, whether it be fought here or in a foreign land.

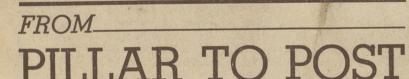

That the young men of this region will be caught in the maiming toils of the war, if it comes to our nation, is a certainty. But for those behind the lines, a job of living normal lives and continuing to build toward future years of more happiness and greater stability remains.

Wars have changed amazingly in accelerated pace on the battle front through mechanization, but on the home front their economic impact has changed but little. Daily headlines reflect the trend toward higher prices, increased wages, and the inevitable inflation. In times such as these, it is the duty of the individual in the interest of his family and self-preservation to give serious thought to his place in the future.

In times of inflation, the safest investment for the individual's savings is real estate, whether it be a farm or a home. A genuine back-to-theland movement is already reflected in the Back Mountain Region.

Facing Dallas now is a period of wide-spread expansion and readjustment, an era in which this region must fit itself along commercial and civic lines to care for a great new influx of people-people who plan to make this countryside an even more gracious and wholesome place in which to live.

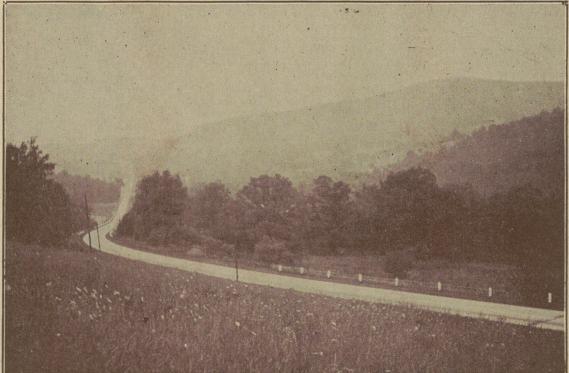

That this progress be kept alive no matter how turbulent and chaotic the international scene becomes, no matter how close bloodshed, devastation and terror come to our doors, is a task to which all of us here in Dallas are dedicated.

Burgess Smith Advances Ten Points To Make This A Greater Community

Asks For Unselfish Co-Operation Of All Back Mountain Citizens

As new highways in this region open and others are under construction, Burgess H. A. Smith of Dallas this week announced a ten-point program which if followed by all citizens of the Back Mountain region will make this an even more thriving and prosperous community.

Outlined, the program advanced by the Burgess had the following points: 1. Community spirit and enthus-@

THOUGHTS OF A CITY DWELLER By MRS. T. M. B. HICKS

With the opening of the new road out Dallas-way, the contrast between the old and the new gets up and hits the motorist in the eye. COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR

August 1, 1941.

Mr. Howard W. Risley, The Dallas Post, Dallas, Pennsylvania. Dear Mr. Risley:

Permit me to take this means in your special edition devoted to the new highway system in the area of Dallas, Harvey's Lake, Trucksville, Shavertown and Tunkhannock to join my friends and neighbors in that area in the deep satisfaction which we all share in seeing our dreams of this new system realized.

This new highway system, which represents an expenditure of more than a million dollars of State funds, will be of untold benefit to all of our people, and of special benefit to those of the Dallas-Harvey's Lake Region.

It has been a matter of considerable per-sonal satisfaction to me, as I know it has to all of you in the area, to see narrow, winding roads replaced by concrete roads of modern design, realigned with better grades and greater visibility.

This work leads not only to more comfortable travel but to vastly safer travel and adds a new unit to our National Defense highway network.

The beauties of the Dallas Area are now even more accessible to all of the people of our State, and I know from personal experience that Dallas hospitality will make them ever welcome and anxious to return again.

> Sincerely yours, GOVERNOR ARTHUR H. JAMES.

revolt in this district, Clark attempted to have a primary candidate chosen from the sixes, but his efforts were overruled by Republican leaders Vaughn, Fine, Langan and Bird, whose personal choice for the nomination is Jones.

Time after time in recent years the Sixth District has been subordinated to areas where the Republican vote is less certain, and political plums have been as scarce as the party vote has been strong. That no candidate for the judgeship was chosen from this district to run in the primaries, mainly because of the selfish interests of the G. O. P. bigwigs, may be the last straw, said

A Message to My Back Mountain Neighbors and Friends:

With our new road system now a reality every resident of the Back Mountain Region should feel a personal pride and enthusiasm over the advantages these new highways will bring.

Our merchants will benefit from increased business-the result of new families settling in this area. To property owners, too, will come profits from increased land values, causing the construction of many new dwellings and, perhaps, new business establishments. Local contractors in all branches of the building industry will enter a period of wide-spread activity. To these folk directly, and to all others as well, prosperity will come as this section expands.

Thousands of people will be passing our doors who never knew us before. It is, therefore, our duty-the duty of every municipal officer and resident-to keep the unsurpassed scenic beauty of our countryside unmarred. Bill boards and make-shift road stands, if they remain, will be a decided factor in keeping real estate values at a lower level.

New industries can be induced to locate here -if all our businessmen co-operate toward such a goal.

Constructive planning at this time will make this area a better place in which to live.
