"Well," he said, "she's gone. Too bad. She sounded promising. I was hoping for a date."

The grinder started to squeal again in a high falsetto whine. Tom uttered a few well-chosen remarks about the squeal, and the incredible broadcast was on the air. The grinder and the paring knife went into a state of suspended animation. Tom looked at me and I looked at Tom. "Orson Welles in one of his lighter moments," I suggested feebly, taking up the quivering and coring where I had left off, but with a dazed expression. The grinding started again, but intermittently, with breathless intervals of silence every time the radio choked off a torch-singer in mid-air to continue its fantastic announcements.

I was back again in Honolulu. The Diamond Head that had been so dominant a feature of my landscape for one halcyon month of leisure; the Waikiki Beach where I cut my foot on a piece of sharp coral; Daisy, the elephant, chained in her stone house in Kapiolani Park, who used to do such a thorough job on an unhusked coconut, rending it with her tusks and kneeling on it for the final kill, the Daisy who two years later knelt on her keeper in the same manner and crushed the life out of him; the Pali, that narrow cleft in the rocks with its sheer-dropping precipice beyond; the Royal Palm trees, the pineapple plantations, the sugar-cane fields; the boiling sands on the west side of the island, where the undertow is so heavy and so treacherous that even strong swimmers are warned to never swim there except in company with other strong swimmers, and where you come up from a dive through the surf with your ears packed full of sand; the glass-bottomed boats moving slowly over beds of coral, the beds of coral giving place to unbelievably sky-blue grottoes with impossible little brightly-striped fish darting about and black sea-urchins bristling from niches in the rock.

The whole lazy panorama of an island Paradise passed before my eyes. The enormous coast-defense guns at Fort Kamehameha whose roar rattled dishes from their shelves when firing practice was going on; smaller guns which were taken for practice jaunts along the roads near Honolulu like a Scottie on a leash; Luke Field, and the impregnable defenses of the greatest of Navy Bases, Pearl Harbor.

And now enemy planes were raining destruction upon the Island of Oahu. As the afternoon passed, and the pile of apples grew smaller and smaller, with more and more big kettles brought from the pantry to hold the pulp and boil down the cider, the news became more and more definite. With the last apple ground and the grinder taken apart for scalding, the radio bulletin made it clear that the Navy had suffered a catastrophe the like of which had lived only in nightmares or the ravings of delirium.

Doorway Contest Opened To All

Mrs. H. A. Smith Is Local Chairman

Mrs. H. A. Smith, chairman of Wyoming Valley Garden Club for the Back Mountain region, this week urged all home owners to enter the Christmas Doorway contest sponsored by the club.

Under the rules of the contest only doors and doorways are to be judged. Decorations are to consist of evergreen boughs, cones or artificial colored material. As a matter of wild flower conservation no decorations composed of laurel or rhododendron will be considered.

Artistic ability, ingenuity and originality of entry will be given as much consideration from the judges as abundance and kind of material. For this reason any person who has a doorway that is tastefully and attractively decorated should send his name and address to Mrs. Smith so that it may be judged.

Addresses of all entries should be mailed to Mrs. Smith not later than Friday morning, December 26. Judging will be done Friday afternoon by a local committee to be named in next week's issue of The Post.

Christmas Parcel Arrives From Hawaii

Mrs. John Girvan had a pleasant experience this week when she opened a parcel postmarked "Hickam Field, Hawaii, December 2" for it contained a Sacred Heart of Jesus statue made from sea shells as a Christmas gift from Ray Elrod of the 28th Bombardment Squadron. The young soldier, a friend of Robert Girvan, spent several months with the Girvan's some years ago. The parcel was the first the Girvan's had heard from him in some months.

Also contained in the package was a picture of the 28th Bombardment Squadron as a gift for Mr. Girvan. In the picture Mr. and Mrs. Girvan recognized "Gib" Hughey of Claude street, who is stationed in the islands.

Newly Formed Orchestra To Play At K-T School

An evening of pleasure is in store for everyone who attends the Christmas Dance at Kingston Township High School on Friday, December 26. The semi-formal affair will begin at 9 and come to a close at 1. The music will be by a newly formed orchestra, composed of local boys, under the capable direction of Andy Antrim.

Cornell & Naugle Buy New Saw Mill

Cornell & Naugle, Meeker lumbermen, have purchased a complete new saw mill from Charles Long, Sweet Valley, Massey-Harris dealer. The saw mill will be run by Massey-Harris tractor power, both Mr. Naugle and Mrs. Cornell having been users of Massey-Harris farm equipment for many years.

Token Of Esteem Given George Ayre

The teachers and custodian of Dallas Borough schools presented a wallet, as a token of friendship, to School Director George Ayre before he left for Panama yesterday. An experienced electrical engineer, Mr. Ayre will serve the United States Government in the operations division of the Panama Canal.

Dallas Choirs To Give Concert Sunday Night

Combined choirs of Dallas Methodist Church will present a musical Sunday evening, December 21 at 7:30. Guest vocalist will be Mrs. Richard Johnson and flute soloist, Robert Henderson. Mrs. Harold Rood is director.

Puerto Rican Mince Pie Ideal For Holiday Dinner

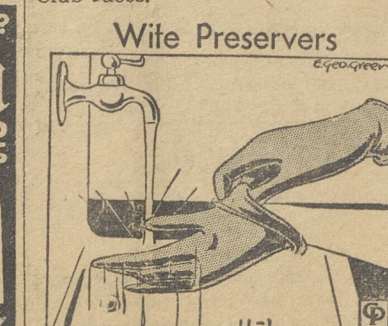

San Juan, Puerto Rico—Here's a dessert you can serve for your holiday dinner.

Puerto Rican Mince Pie With Rum Sauce

Mix one quart of your favorite mince meat with 3 ounces of Puerto Rican rum and one big apple, peeled and chopped fine. Fill into lined pie plate, cover and bake. Serve hot with Rum Sauce.

Rum Sauce: 1 jar of No. 2 apricots, strained through wire sieve; sweeten to taste and add, just before serving, 2 ounces of Puerto Rican rum.
