

Dallas District Leadership School To Open Wednesday, September 16

The seventeenth semi-annual Leadership Training School of Dallas District will open Wednesday evening, September 16, in the Dallas Methodist Church at 7:30 o'clock.

The curriculum committee has spent much time and thought in planning courses that will be of interest and of great value to all church school workers and leaders. They feel that they have been exceedingly fortunate in securing for the faculty ministers, who have such a wide field of experience and background from which to draw.

Rev. Roswell Lyon, pastor of the Shavertown and Huntville Methodist Churches, is to be one of the outstanding leaders. He recently came to this area from the Plains Methodist Church. At one time he was director of the Youth Work in Luzerne County. Last May Rev. Lyon was elected chairman of the board of administration of Leadership Training in Dallas District. He will capably handle the course, "Recreational Leadership." It will be of definite interest to all of those responsible for the recreational program of the church.

Rev. Franklin R. Payne, pastor of the Huntsville Christian Church, is another of the fine leaders to participate in the school. Rev. Mr. Payne is not new to most of Dallas District as he has taught in the past three schools. Those having taken one or more courses with him previously, will be greatly pleased to learn that he has again kindly consented to be on the faculty. This time he will teach "Resources for Adult Christian Education." All adult leaders will find this course of vital interest.

Rev. Herbert Frankfort, pastor of the Shavertown Lutheran Church, will also be an excellent addition to the teaching staff of this school. This is the first time it has been convenient for Rev. Frankfort to assist the District in this type of work, but he has done such a splendid work among his own people in Shavertown that it is expected that his course, "The Prophets and their Messages," will be one of the largest.

Rev. Clayton Hoag, pastor of the Trucksville Methodist Church, is to teach "Methods of Education Regarding the Alcohol Problem." Rev. Mr. Hoag is very competent in dealing with this course as he has already taught the same course at a Junior High School Camp for Methodist Young People at Dimmock, Pa. All interested persons will profit greatly from his experience and background.

Rev. Austin Prynne, pastor of the host church, has been very closely connected in the past with the West Pittston Leadership Training School. Dallas District will benefit immeasurably by his experience and wealth of knowledge. His acceptance of the course, "Helping Leaders Improve Their Work," is most welcome. Church School teachers and officers will find a stimulating and invigorating experience in this course with Rev. Prynne.

Top: A Sunderland flying boat caught this one in the Bay of Biscay on its way out to start attacking Atlantic shipping, damaged it so much it had to go back home. Middle: A Whitley bomber caught this one in the Bay of Biscay, sank it. Bottom: This one was found and sunk in the Mediterranean by a U.S.-built Catalina patrol bomber. Its British crew tried to land on the water to pick up survivors, nearly wrecked their own plane.

Deer Causing Crop Damage

Oats In Fields Are Ruined By The Herds

Farmers of the Fairmount township section that includes part of the Red Rock Mountain are complaining of damage being done by deer in that section. Both Eugene Bostian and Hope Larish, whose farms are near the foot of the mountain, report that deer have eaten the better part of the oats crop this year, even nosing into the shocks after the oats had been cut.

Under state law, a farmer whose crops are being attacked by deer has a legal right to shoot depredatory deer, but no such cases have been reported from the Fairmount section as yet.

Those who see deer in numbers report that there are many more does than bucks in the herds this season, while a number of spotted fawns have been seen with the does.

That Distant Roar Was Escaping Steam

The distant roar that has had residents of the Borough guessing for the past two weeks emanated from the Lehigh Valley Railroad siding where workmen were unloading five tank cars of asphalt for use on the new Idetown-Huntsville road.

In order to make the viscous material flow more rapidly from the tank cars to tank trucks steam was forced under pressure through the big tanks from an especially built truck used for the purpose. The continual roar of the escaping steam, night and day, as well as Sundays provided a mystery that sleepless residents were unable to solve.

Surfacing Borough Streets

Dallas is one of the few communities in Luzerne County where road surfacing oil has been released for street repairs. As the result four village streets are being resurfaced. They are, Center Hill road, Church street, Spring street and Norton avenue.

F. F. A. Grow Tomatoes

Members of Anthracite Chapter F. F. A. of Dallas Township High School are growing an acre of tomatoes on the Kozemchak farm on Overbrook avenue. The crop is coming along in fine shape so that the boys started harvesting this week.

line unburden themselves of their guilty secret. Sometimes they ask if they may borrow my daughter for bait. With her peculiar talents, Barbara can walk into the lobby of the Ritz, and a flea will rise to greet her. This makes the terrain safe for everybody else.

Sometimes the voice at the other end of the line merely wishes to commiserate, and to admit that she, too, has suffered on occasion.

Sometimes there is a joyful babble. Fleas had heretofore been a subject to be ignored as too indelicate. Conventional shackles rent asunder, the lady wishes to relieve her mind. She also wishes to know, shall she or shall she not get rid of her dog or her cat? I struggle mightily with temptation. The instinct for malicious mischief urges me to advise her to get rid of her pet. But social conscience triumphs, and I warn her on no account to allow her only safeguard to leave home.

There have been various occasions in the past when the situation called for definite and constructive, or rather destructive, action. There was that time when we pinned our faith to a sulphur candle lighted hastily at the foot of the cellar stairs, with an equally hasty retreat up the stairs and a slamming of the door at the top. Maybe the area was too large. Maybe the candle was too small. The lighting of the candle fortified the spirit for a period of twenty-four hours, but it had little or no effect upon the fleas. If anything, it sharpened their appetite.

Carbon Disulphide, a malodorous liquid which smells like an overripe egg or a socially correct Sulphur Spring, was equally unproductive of results.

Black Flag powder, applied locally to the fur-bearing animal responsible, is very soothing to the pet. It has the happy result of making the fleas leave home, rendering them pale and anaemic and more voracious than ever. As long as the Black Flag remains in the fur, the cat will repel boarders. This makes it tough on the humans, who can't wear Black Flag without causing neighborhood conversation.

One-Spot powder, given time enough, will do the trick. It apparently eases its victims into a state of euthanasia, imperceptibly and painlessly. By the time they realize that something is amiss, they are too groggy to manifest concern, and too drugged to do anything about it.

My friends enter my living-room, avid with curiosity, and suffering from politely suppressed qualms. They look at the couch, that perfectly harmless couch that figures so conspicuously in the column, and select a chair on the far side of the room. I loll on the couch myself, and they regard me with respect and something akin to awe.

They maneuver into a position which gives them an uninterrupted view of the region beneath the couch. They are looking for that classic sheet of fly-paper with the bit of raw beef in the center, one New England lady's unique solution to her problem.

Or was it a solution? All I know is that it was advocated in the dignified pages of the Boston Transcript as a cure-all. The idea was that the live-stock, frenzied by the aroma of raw meat, would leap heedlessly for the bait and stick to the fly-paper. The sadistically inclined could then gloat over the struggles of the sticky captives without endangering their own ankles.

The bug-man, waiting philosophically until all these experiments have proven to be of no avail, lurks in the background like an oversized spider, secure in the knowledge that all things come to him who waits. When his services are called for by a discouraged and demoralized housewife, he appears with deadly efficiency, makes a few expert passes with his little spray-gun, and retires, jingling in his pocket a goodly share of the weekly household allowance.
