

Nelson Appeals For Intensive Drive To Find Heavy Farm Scrap

The Government is asking the American Farmer to dedicate the remaining weeks of 1942 to an intensified scrap hunt. Steel mills need more heavy scrap and the farms are one of the best sources of this type of metal.

We need your further help in this farm drive, and in aiding our salvage committees to continue this effort throughout the next few weeks. Mats and other material to help you are being prepared and will be mailed soon. All salvage committees are being instructed to continue to make available to the farmer all their transportation facilities and manpower and to co-operate with you in every possible way. The nation is looking to the American Farmer. I am sure that with your help he will come through.

DONALD M. NELSON, Chairman.

So much for Franksiving. Hardly had the remnants of the turkey reached the hash and soup stage when the next festival was upon us. Thrift recommended a nice juicy pork roast, or at the most a large stewed chicken with noodles. The family rose en masse.

What did I mean, proposing such a sacrifice for Thanksgiving? Thanksgiving meant turkey, lots of turkey, a turkey composed entirely of second joints and drumsticks if possible, but surely a turkey. It is the white meat that goes begging in our family. We have one child who used to lie awake nights before Thanksgiving, wondering how she could tactfully ease it over to the Grand High Carver that she yearned for dark meat or even that little nub of a tail instead of for the choice slice of breast that always appeared on her plate. She was a very polite child in those days, but she has made a noble recovery. Nowadays she dismembers a leg, and I get stuck with the white meat.

"We just had Thanksgiving, you gluttons," I shrieked, "Do you want me to spend all my time in the kitchen?"

It was the wrong approach. It developed that they all considered the kitchen my proper sphere of activity. Last week's dinner was after all just a dinner. A very good dinner, at that, with turkey, but that bird had been in honor of the absent member of the tribe. And besides, that turkey ranked right along with water under the bridge or over the dam. The family had its appetite whetted for turkey, and it would not settle for any lesser animal.

So we had a second turkey. By the time it, too, had reached the stage of hash and soup, we were all viewing the remains with a singular lack of enthusiasm.

You can eat roast beef every day in the year—if you can get it in these days of beef shortage—but turkey after the third appearance begins to pall. Its palate-appeal describes a downward curve until the last bone and last bit of dried stuffing are shovelled thankfully into the furnace along with the grapefruit skins and coffee grounds.

For three successive years the turkey market did a thriving business, with everybody on the border line between two states of conflicting political opinion buying double. But things are back on a pre-Franklin basis as far as Thanksgiving is concerned, and folks can once more order a single turkey without being bulldozed into buying its twin the following week.

It was a good racket while it lasted.

It's common sense to be thrifty. If you save you are thrifty. War Bands help you to save and help to save America. Buy your ten per cent every pay day.
