spade along with the seeds and buy the fresh vegetables at the corner grocery.

Fortunately, civic pride combined with a good health egotism combine to keep the amateur digger up on his toes and down on his heels, and the second week of intensive cultivation brings with it the second wind.

Many a front yard paved with hard-pan and furnace ashes is about to get the surprise of its life, and many a personal spare-tire is about to melt away under the influence of the spring sunshine, the preliminary spading, the eternal hoeing and weeding, and the pursuit of the agile potato-bug.

Such activity has a way of promoting complete relaxation immediately after sundown, with an overwhelming desire to hit the hay with the nightingale instead of the morning robin. Expensive body contouring salons charge real folding money for stream-lining the figure. Stream-line it yourself, and have a truck-patch instead of a depleted pocket book to show for the lost poundage and the increased muscle fiber.

With the point-system of food rationing in full swing, and the point requirements for each canned vegetable twice as high as foreseen by the most pessimistic, Victory Gardens are promoted from the patriotic-gesture class to the class of absolute necessity.

There need be no hardship in the matter of rationing food, if each family is willing to do its share. There are plenty of cereal foods on hand, plenty of wheat, plenty of rice. There will undoubtedly and inevitably be a lack of the variety that we have been accustomed to expect on our dinner tables. So what? If everybody makes a point of growing tomatoes for summer use and for winter canning, the vitamins and minerals contained in this most versatile of vegetables will adequately balance the starches.

Tomatoes are probably the most important vegetable that can be grown. People crossing the desert take along canned tomatoes to allay thirst. Tomatoes make a marvelous tomato-butter, and their use in everyday cookery is varied as the patches in an old-fashioned quilt.

It seems reasonable to suppose that only those people fortunate to have large and sunny plots of ground should attempt to grow anything that takes up as much room as potatoes and corn, but surely almost everybody has room for a few tomato plants.

Several years ago, in fact, immediately after the last world conflagration, with the Armies of Occupation still in Europe and the Stars and Stripes flying from the Ehrenbreitstein, I had occasion to take a trip down the Moselle River. After twenty-five years, the terraced gardens along the river stand out in my mind as marvels of engineering ingenuity. The slope was so precipitous that walls of solid masonry assisted nature in providing space for the grave vines. A perpendicular twenty-foot wall provided precarious toe-hold for three little grapevines. There was, of course, no possibility of cultivation except by hand, as nothing less sure-footed than a mountain goat could have negotiated those precipitous slopes. From the road along the river far below, the walls had the appearance of actually leaning toward each other, and I have always been convinced that the harvesting of the crop was done with a vacuum cleaner.

Nimble-footed children of six, wearing little work smocks of black sateen, worked side by side with smoked oldsters of eighty-four, painfully scratching the thin soil on the narrow ledges and exercising great care that not a spoonful of the precious soil be lost. Fertilizer was carried up the winding corkscrew paths in wicker baskets arranged papoose-fashion on the back of the gardener, basket, fertilizer and all, would have been in the river below.

There is enough rich land lying idle in this country to feed the starving people of the world, and with no such expedients as those practiced in overcrowded lands where each square foot must earn its board and keep. But people will have to spend energy and time over and above the forty-hour week if anything of real value is to be accomplished.

State Expert Here

Disease and insect control for potatoes and vegetables will be discussed by O. D. Burke and John Deal, State College experts, at a meeting to which all growers are invited Wednesday morning, March 10 at 8 p. m. in Carverton Grange Hall.

Resolutions Sent To Mrs. Thomas Him

Grieved by the loss of one of their most faithful members and church workers, members of the Official Board and Board of Trustees of Dallas Methodist Church have prepared the following resolutions to be published in The Dallas Post and sent to the wife and daughters of the late Thomas P. Him.

The resolutions: Official Board of the First Methodist Church of Dallas, Pennsylvania, is faced with a real sense of loss in the passing of Mr. Thomas P. Him, who at the time of his death was a member of the Board of Trustees, Treasurer of the Current Expense Fund, Church Lay Leader, member of the Board of Stewards and of the Finance Committee. He was intensely interested in the program of the Church and was helpful in planning and carrying out that program. His thoughtful and common sense advice was a real contribution to the Boards and the minister.

Therefore, we desire to record our feeling of loss and to express to his wife and daughters, our deepest sympathy in our common loss. Through prayer we have already and will continue to claim for you the sustaining power of the grace of God.

The Boards by their actions on March 2, 1943 directed that a copy of this expression of sympathy be sent to the family of Mr. Him and to The Dallas Post.

FOR THE OFFICIAL BOARD
William M. Baker, President,
Board of Trustees,
Arthur P. Keefer, Secretary,
Official Board,
Austin L. Pryn, Minister.

Before moving to Koonsville about two years ago, "Billie" Davis was employed by Arthur Newman. He was a youth of excellent character and in the words of Mr. Newman, "a wonderful kid, who could be depended upon to do a job well." Until last Thanksgiving his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Scott, lived on the old Dallas Fair Ground, Mr. Scott being employed by Mr. Newman. The family now lives in Shickshinny. About three months ago, "Billie" Davis married Claire Schultz of Koonsville and the couple had been living with her grandmother, Mrs. Abie Search.

Besides his wife and mother, he leaves a brother, Robert Davis who was with the U. S. Marines on Guadalcanal, and a sister, Mrs. Peter Bombof of New York City.

A graduate of Dallas Township High School, he had been employed by the Sordoni Company for the past two years. He attended services at the Koonsville Methodist Church. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon from Markle Funeral Home in Shickshinny with interment at Shickshinny.

Who Will Win The Championship?

Dallas Borough

The Dallas Boro Boys' Basketball team, trying to take its fourth championship in a row, has had one of the best seasons since it entered the Back Mountain League quite a few years ago. The team has suffered one setback during the ten-game schedule, that being to Dallas Township who is tied for first place with the Boro.

The Boro team averages 52.7 points per game, while their opponents average 43.2 points per game.

The success of the team is due to the cooperation of the team itself, the Coach, Howard C. Tinsley, and the managers, William Bogart, and Paul Helfrich.

Dallas Township

The game to be played tonight on the Kingston Township floor between Dallas Township and Dallas Boro will decide who will take the championship cup this year. Lake Girls Top League

Lehman Twp. Team Takes Second Place

The Back Mountain Girls' Basketball League ended its season with a bang last Friday night when Laketon met Kingston Township on the latter's floor. Laketon won over K. T. with a 43-20 score and took the cup for the second successive year after a not too easy struggle with Lehman for the title. Betty Ann Newhart brought in 20 of those 43 points for the winning team.

Betty seems to be an expert at "bringing home the bacon", for her seasons' points add up to 118. Mary Delany isn't far behind with 93 points, followed by Lois Grey, 48 points, and Margaret Bombay, 24 points. Bouquets to the guards for their splendid work during the season—"Shorty" Genevieve Gullitus, 6 Bertha Kern and Jean Newhart—and also to the coach, Florence Hausch, who certainly did a grand bit of coaching. Other members of the Laketon squad are Doris Kocher, Marjorie Shiner, Naomi Huntzinger, Francis O. Crispell, Audrey Boone, Doris Rossman and Elaine Avery. Manager of the team is Helen Szafran; assistant manager is Elaine Avery.
