Hello, fellas!

This includes all the girls in service, too, but I never wrote to any strange girls in my life, so why start now?

It sure is a changed place around here with so many of our friends gone into the service. We used to be kept awake all night listening to the jalopies pulling away from certain night spots, but now things have changed a little. We don't hear cars so much, any more, we hear horses. It sounds like a bunch of cowboys. The horses make more noise, but they never have a blowout and we always get home safely. Notice the we? Yes, I'm in on "Shel" Cave sold his horse for, he says, it's too cold to go to feed it in the winter time. We feel better since he did-now we aren't afraid to buy meat from him.

Things are quiet around here. The Dallas Post gathers most of the news, but I do know some that they did not get. The other night, after a hard day's work driving truck, "Shorty" Donnelly took a bull which he, Russ Dodd and Bruce Williams are going to eat this winter, for a walk. It must have been quite a walk because the bull lost five pounds. Maybe he couldn't stand the night air. It was pretty cold that night and maybe he

"Rod" Ingram has moved back in town and has taken up horseback

"Bub" Kern has a shortage of beer (so does Rinkin), but he proved a successful farmer, like the rest of us. He planted two bushel of potatoes and only got one when he dug them up.

This is just an idea of how everything is going around here.

You fellows, no matter where you are or what branch of the service you are in, are sure doing a swell job for us and Uncle Sam. Maybe, before long, some of us fathers will be in there helping to win this battle.

Don't feel too discouraged if some of the boys here at home didn't answer that last letter or didn't write at all. It isn't because they have forgotten you, for you boys are first in everyone's mind. It's just that they can't write a letter or don't have the three cents. They're good excuses,

Well, fellows, this is the end for this time and I wish you all the luck in the world.
