ing is missing, and the landing moves up and down like the waves of the ocean. But the technical crew promises that the final coat of paint will be kiss-proof, that the railing will be fastened securely in place by the evening of the dress rehearsal, and that the landing will have a sawhorse or something under it to prevent its behaving like a trap-door.

In other words, rehearsals for "The Man Who Came To Dinner" are proceeding according to the norm.

It promises to be a good show. A production put on by home-grown talent has a different atmosphere from one put on by a professional cast. It is more fun. Even if you have seen the Broadway version, don't miss this one.

Harp Marx, thinly disguised as Banjo, riots through a scene with Mr. Whiteside's nurse. Six angelic choir-boys chant "Silent Night, Holy Night" as a background for Mr. Whiteside's Christmas broadcast, while Miss Preen, bitten by a penguin, provides competition, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley wail over letters left by their runaway offspring. It all adds up to something approaching bedlam, with each contributing yelp timed to a nicety.

The cast is a large one, and for the first two weeks of rehearsal it was anything but static. There was always a delightful uncertainty about the personnel, and parts were shuffled like a deck of cards. Two elderly clubwomen, described in the script as fat, fair and forty, have in the course of the rehearsals dropped off twenty years and forty pounds apiece, and are now comparing notes on the burning question of how to grow old overnight.

A jar of calf's foot jelly and a begonia make a momentary appearance, conveyed by the clubwomen, and ten thousand hypothetical cockroaches escape from their glass home into Mrs. Stanley's outraged kitchen.

The beautiful blonde leaves in the Egyptian mummy-case, and Mr. Whiteside slips once more on the front door step.

What more could anybody ask of a play?

Flushing's out for me and mine; I'm glad we live in REVITALIZER time

DOUBLE DIAMOND

READY MIXED

REVITALIZER

BETTER THAN A FLUSH NOURISHES WHILE IT CONDITIONS

REVITALIZER is the modern successor to flushing mash. It aids in gently cleansing the digestive tract without any weakening purge. It assists in controlling parasites, and also tends to eliminate excess mucus in the intestines, helping to restore a normal condition.

In addition, REVITALIZER helps fortify the birds with a surplus of Vitamins and Minerals.

CONSIDER THESE PROFIT FACTORS

- ✓ A Ready-Mixed Conditioner. No fussing; no bother. Even distribution throughout.
- ✓ It helps offset possible feed deficiencies.
- ✓ It tends to stimulate jaded appetites, encouraging greater consumption of feed. The more your birds eat, the quicker and larger the returns.
- ✓ Lessens shock of changing from one brand of feed to another, should this become necessary.
- ✓ Helps any feeding program.
- ✓ Inexpensive. Fed one to three days per month as directed. REVITALIZER costs only a few additional cents per bird per year!
