A new toothbrush and a small comb to replace the one in need of dental attention were bought at the corner drugstore and laid out in a spot where they could not be overlooked when the actual packing was undertaken.

The suitcases and the dunnage-bag opened their mouths accommodatingly and were fed substantially, as of three paragraphs above. We crammed the baby into his pixie hood and his sky-blue snow-suit, rolled him in extra blanket, and started for the train.

The train pulled out, and we came back to the house to check up. The nipples were on the kitchen sink, six of them, the total supply. Investigation of the refrigerator showed a quart of newly-prepared formula, still warm from the boiling water. The bottles were gone, but the new comb and toothbrush were still on the sidelines. The radiators still held a full supply of unmentionables, three sleepers flapped damp wings in the basement.

"What," said Tom in a daze, "do you suppose was in that dunnage-bag? It weighed a ton, and it clinked."

Yesterday we had a letter. We had refused to tear our thinning hair over the situation, because after all it was out of our hands and on the lap of the gods. But we wondered a little about the reactions of the infant phenomenon when he found, A, That he didn't have a nipple B, That he didn't have anything of a comforting nature in that eight o'clock bottle.

We found out. It appears that the baby, who had heretofore been fed strictly according to schedule, with everything boiled a la Baby Book, had accommodated himself to circumstances over which he had no control. With a lethal weapon known familiarly as a Toad-Sticker, his mother had punctured a small can of evaporated milk, mixed same with hot water from the washstand in the Ladies' Room, and had poured the combination down his throat, partly on the outside, partly on the inside. In the absence of conventional raiment, he had gone by-bye with his loins girl in a Pullman towel, while the diaper in which he started out, dried on the radiator.

The comb situation was not discovered until too late to do anything about it, but the dunnage bag did contain by some miracle a brush.

There was another baby on the same sleeper, and when one baby was asleep the other wasn't. The two mothers, haggard of eye and gritting their teeth helplessly, passed each other on their way to the Ladies' Room, bearing their respective offspring. The passengers groaned and cursed, the porter settled more and more deeply into a Stygian gloom.

A pleasant time was had by all. Came morning, with both babies rested and refreshed, both mothers worn to a shred, and the combined wrath of the passengers enough to derail the train. Both mothers tipped the porter liberally to partially compensate him for his troubles, but he was a broken man. He accepted the bills with a listless hand, but his heart wasn't in it.

Where, oh where is the soothing syrup of yesteryear? Maybe it isn't according to the baby books, but the percentage of alcohol in most of those soothing syrups is guaranteed to induce a deep sleep. I am beginning to see something in soothing syrup, especially when traveling.

As soon as they learned that Trucksville Water Company might be for sale, Kingston Township Supervisors and their solicitor Attorney Don Coughlin, met with J. H. and W. L. Lance, consulting engineers, to discuss the advisability of municipal ownership. No definite action was taken, although there is considerable sentiment for municipal ownership in Kingston Township. William F. Myers, member of the Board of Supervisors, said, "we have decided not to do anything for the present, but we would like to hear more from the people of Kingston Township on this important matter. The Supervisors feel that both Dallas Borough and Dallas Township should be consulted and that these three communities working together would find municipal ownership a profitable venture". Bruce Long and Philip Pasco, the two other members of the Board could not be reached at the time the Post went to press.

It will be remembered that the purchase of Scranton Gas & Electric Company and the Springbrook Water Company by outside interests—and their subsequent merger, was followed by a 60 per cent increase in rate.—Editor's Note.

Board Studies Ownership Of Water Company

Deal Is Pending For Purchase Of Trucksville Company

Announcement was made Tuesday that negotiations are pending for the sale of Mt. Greenwood Heights Water Company to Wilkes-Barre Suburban Water Company. At the same time it was indicated that the same firm has opened negotiations for the Trucksville Water Company, owned by the Hazeltine Estate.

Wilkes-Barre Suburban Water Company purchased the Dallas and Shavertown Water companies some months ago for an amount said to have been substantially less than half of the total fixed capital valuations of those companies, less depreciation.

The Dallas Water Company was valued at $122,000 and the Shavertown Water Company at $68,000, making the purchase price to the Wilkes-Barre Suburban Company considerably less than $80,000 for the two properties.

Wilkes-Barre Suburban Water Company—a name unpopular with local water consumers—is owned by a Philadelphia brokerage firm.

As soon as they learned that Trucksville Water Company might be for sale, Kingston Township Supervisors and their solicitor Attorney Don Coughlin, met with J. H. and W. L. Lance, consulting engineers, to discuss the advisability of municipal ownership. No definite action was taken, although there is considerable sentiment for municipal ownership in Kingston Township. William F. Myers, member of the Board of Supervisors, said, "we have decided not to do anything for the present, but we would like to hear more from the people of Kingston Township on this important matter. Funeral Services Held For Mrs. Anna Rogers

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon in the Lehman Methodist Church for Mrs. Anna Rogers, of Orangeville, a resident of the Back Mountain region for forty years. She died Saturday morning in the Bloomsburg Hospital, where she had been a patient for ten weeks. She was eighty years old.

Born in Wales, she came to this country when she was eight years old. Her husband, James, a farmer, died about ten years ago, and she later went to live with her daughter, Mrs. Earl Ward, of Orangeville. She was a member of the Lehman Methodist Church.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Ward, and Miss Nettie Rogers, of Lehman; two grandsons, Paul Culver, of Washington, D. C., and Norman Culver, of Williamsburg, Va.; a granddaughter, Mrs. Oscar Miller, of Tunkhannock, R. D.; and a sister, Mrs. Gebler, of Wilkes-Barre.

Burial was in the Lehman Cemetery.

Foreign Property Owners Must File New Reports

Citizens of the Back Mountain area who own any property in foreign countries have been notified by their Postmasters that they must file reports of their foreign holdings with the Treasury Department before December 1. The notice was given by means of a poster placed on display in the post office.

Postmaster John B. Newhart, of Alderson, points out that it is necessary for the government to have as complete information as possible on the American stake abroad to assist the military authorities and the civilian governments on the fighting fronts and to bring about sound solutions of the post-war problems.

Report forms, known as TFR-500, may be obtained through commercial banks, or from the nearest Federal Reserve Bank, the postmaster states. Penalties are provided for those who willfully fail to file reports.
