own confines. The driving urge which sidetracks everything of lesser importance in time of national peril, turns in upon itself when there is no outer threat. From this present world upheaval there should emerge a saner world order. We pray that this may come to pass.

Stripped of high-sounding phrases, what the world at Christmas time is praying for is not safety for democracy, not safety for communism, not safety for one nation or another, but safety for children everywhere.

Children everywhere, all over the world, are paying the penalty for a world's misdeeds, for adult shortsightedness, for greed, for jealousy and for distrust.

Children are born into their environment, thrust into a world which they have had no part in making. Children are a product of their surroundings. Their early training outweighs their inherited capacity. A child trained to believe that he has a right to dominate others, will dominate. A child trained in kindness and forbearance will be kind and forbearing.

Christmas Party

Mrs. Janet Evans entertained members of her Sunday School Class at a Christmas party at her home, in Trucksville, recently. Gifts were exchanged and refreshments served. Present were: Louis Sword, Lillian Myrick, Doris Parsons, Marie Johnson, Kathleen Smith, Sylvia Brown, Barbara Metz, Jane Coolbaugh, Barbara Hoag, Hazel and Helen Roushey, Ruth Evans, Peggy Greenwood, Gwendolyn Clifford.

It is well at Christmas-time to reflect upon these things.

Shall it be said of us that the Son of Man knows not where to lay His head? That there is no room at the Inn?

Labor Shortage Limits Supply Of Yule Trees

All indications point to a great demand for Christmas trees in Pennsylvania this season, but at prices in excess of previous years because of the limited supply.

The shortage of labor has made it practically impossible to harvest the number of trees cut during other seasons. Last year there was a tree shortage but the transportation of many trees was permitted because of previous orders and commitments. This year the labor shortage is worse and growers were informed in advance of shipping difficulties.

There is also a shortage in the supply of holly wreaths and in other Christmas decorations because many of the persons who usually make up the decorations are now in war work.

The principal Christmas trees that will be cut in Pennsylvania this year are white pine, hemlock, scrub pine, pitch pine and red cedar. The red and white spruces and balsam fir are usually imported from other States.

The scarcity may result in persons going upon lands of another and cutting Christmas trees without the permission of the owner. Anyone removing a tree from private land without permission of the owner is guilty of misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof may be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding $300, or undergo imprisonment not exceeding six months or both.

The history of the Christmas tree extends so far back that it is difficult to trace its origin. Many say the custom arose in Egypt where lighted palm trees were used in the winter celebration.

Chimney Catches Fire

The chimney at the Charles Wheaton Lee home, on Lake street, caught fire last Saturday when the fireplace became overheated. Henry M. Laing Fire Company was called in. Damage was slight.
