A well-loved schoolteacher of ours relates that when she was a little girl of ten, it was her contribution to the family economy to scrub the kitchen floor. Usually she liked to scrub the kitchen floor, revelling happily in the soapsuds, the smooth rotary motion of the brush, and the resultant sparkling cleanliness

But one morning Little Hattie was feeling a bit disgruntled. It was the appointed day to scrub the | kitchen floor, but the prospect did not enchant. On one slim pretext or another she postponed the evil hour until suppertime. Supper time furnished one more workable Mrs. Harry Snyder Is alibi, for no one could reasonably expect a kitchen floor to be scrub- Hostess At Tea Party bed around the hurrying feet of the family matriarch.

"Hattie", said her mother firmly, "are you or are you not going to get that floor scrubbed sometime this month?"

Little Hattie squirmed and hedged. "Mamma, I'll do it first thing in the morning, honest I will. aret Bryden, Clara Ohlman, Mild-I don't WANT to do it tonight. Besides", a happy afterthought, "I've got my homework to do."

"Very well," said Hattie's mamma, a lady of unfailing resource and humor and a unique method of dealing with the recalcitrant, "if Ruth Troxell and the hostess. you don't feel like doing your job, Express Appreciation

"Oh Mamma", wailed Little Hattie in horror, and with a premonition of what was in the wind," you helped them in any way during mustn't scrub the floor. I'LL do it first thing in the morning, cross my heart and hope to die. Please Mamma, PUH-LEASE.'

"Hattie", said her mother, enjoying herself hugely but preserving a poker face, "I will finish this floor if it kills me. My back may drop in two," here she clutched th specified portion of her anatomy and emitted a hollow groan, "but I always finish what I start. And let this be a lesson to you, young

As the froth of suds advanced toward Little Hattie, Little Hattie drew her shrinking toes further and further aloft to avoid being engulfed by the rising tide. Her mother scrubbed all around the chair of penance until Little Hattie was isolated, a lone and despondent little island in a sea of suds.

Just as she felt that she could bear it no longer, that human misery had been pushed as far as it could go, her mother gave the glistening floor one final swipe, rinsed the brush and scrub-cloth briskly in the bucket, and removed Little Hattie from her perch with a forgiving hand.

I have always laughed at that story, but not because of the vision of Little Hattie sitting on her chair while her mother scrubbed the floor. It is because of the horrid conviction of the reactions of my own offspring if faced with the same situation.

I can see them now, all four of them, perched in points of vantage around the kitchen.

The pronouncement as to the kitchen floor is made. It goes something like this:

"Well, if one of you lazy bums isn't going to come across and scrub this floor, I suppose I'll be driven to doing it myself."

Cheers from the onlookers. "Stout fella, Mamma. And while you're about it, you'd better just swish out the pantry, too. It's a sight. Shows up your housekeeping something terrible."

The spectators arrange themselves comfortably in grandstand seats, and the exhibition gets under

"Lookit, Mamma, you missed that spot under the stove. Right there, near that far hind leg."

"Hey, Mamma, how about that pool of water in front of the sink. You ought to get it good and dry. One of us might slip in it.'

"Why don't you do a good thorough job while you're at it? The LATEST RESCUE TECHNIQUE, invented by Britain's R.A.F., is to drop lifeboats from rescue planes. The boats float down by parachutes to American, British or other Allied airmen who have crashed at sea. When they clamber aboard, the men find food, supplies, and an engine which enables them to reach a home port. Many airmen already owe their lives to this ingenious craft.
