"Chet" Sutton Completes Missions

(Continued from Page One) Munich not far from the Swiss border. It seemed all the fighters in the Luftwaffe were after us that day. Three of the crew—not my own boys but another crew—were injured. Our own oxygen system was hit. We came down to 10,000 feet for oxygen, a dangerous height for Fortresses, and the best height for the Luftwaffe. I've always admired the snow-capped Alps, but the English Channel was far more beautiful that day.

Chet's crew called themselves "Nine Yanks an a Rebel", the copilot, Lt. F. L. McIntyre of Marion, S. C. was the only Southerner. Other members were Lt. Harold Green, Bronx, N. Y., navigator; Lt. John Weeman, St. Louis, Mo., bombardier; S/Sgt. Ray Burroughs, Plainfield, N. J., waist gunner; S Sgt. Domenic Leo, Cleveland, Ohio, waist gunner; T/Sgt. Wilburn Harper, Springfield, Ind., engineer; S. Sgt. Edwin Creamer, Belair, Ohio, ball turret; T/Sgt. Eugene Kiley, Yonkers, N. Y., radio operator; S.
