Tunkhannock To Have New National Cemetery

A new National Cemetery will be built in the Tunkhannock area, according to an announcement made Monday by the War Department. One of five planned for Pennsylvania, it will accommodate 75,000 graves.

Although the available lands in Wyoming County have been surveyed by Army Engineers to determine which is most suitable, the exact location of the new project has not yet been announced.

More than 5,000,000 graves will be provided in the seventy-nine new cemeteries throughout the country proposed by the War Department. All honorably discharged veterans of any United States war, their wives or widows, and members of women's branches of the armed forces may be buried in the National Cemeteries.

Lehman Firemen Answer First Call

John Sidler, vocational-education teacher at Lehman Schools, has been appointed chief in full charge of the equipment and organization of the company for fire fighting.

Mr. Sidler has announced that day time fire calls should be telephoned or sent to 369-R-2 Lehman Schools. Nights calls should be sent to Mr. Sidler, Dallas 470-R-8.

Constitution and By-Laws of Lehman Volunteer Fire Company provide that, "In case of dissolution of the company, all property therefrom, remaining after the payment and discharge of all debts and liabilities of the company, shall be the property of Lehman Township School District."

Immediate future plans for the company include demonstration in fire fighting throughout the town-

BACK MOUNTAIN AIR AND SUNSHINE MAKE A MAN'S LUNGS FREE

"Fresh air and sunshine of the Back Mountain region can do wonders for a man," is the way Ignatz Hozempa, whose son, Raymond, is with a bomber squadron in China, expresses it.

Mr. Hozempa has worked in the mines all of his life, and still does, but thirteen years ago he moved to a small farm at Lehman. "When I came out here," he says, "my lungs were tight, just like a new accordion, but now after thirteen years of fresh air and sunshine they are fine, just like an old accordion twenty-five years old." And as he spoke with feeling of what he thinks of the Back Mountain's hills and air he expanded his chest and took a big breath. "Gee, it's good," he said.

Mr. Hozempa is not the first man who has felt new life surge through his veins when he breathed this clear mountain air.

ship; a fire instruction school for firemen; construction of a fire house and a drive to raise additional funds.

President of the company is Howard L. Hendricks, supervising principal of Lehman Schools. Committee members are: Finance, Arthur Ehret, John Sidler, Stanley Culp, Harry Howell, Cory Major, Walter Chamberlain and Howard Stull; Finance, Charles Nuss, Samuel Rhoads, Robert Scott, Harry Edwards, Leonard Ide, and Loren Keller; Law and Order, L. E. Beisel, Alexander Tough, Lewis Ide, William Valentine, Joe Ide and Lansford Sutton.

Dallas Health-Education Program Is Outstanding In Pennsylvania

Board Of Health Program Of Talks, Movies And Inoculations In 1942

By DR. F. BUDD SCHOOLEY

The security of a nation is dependent on what each community does to protect and conserve the health of school children. Modern health departments should be efficiently administered by qualified physicians or by individuals who have been trained in public health and are free from political influences.

Card Of Thanks

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schultz wish to thank all of those whose messages of condolence and sympathetic expressions of kindness have been so helpful during their bereavement. They also wish to thank those who sent flowers and those who offered their services during the Memorial Services held for their son, Roy, at Alderson Methodist Church.

The modern school health program provides a healthful school environment, periodic health examinations, prevention and control of communicable diseases, and health education. School health work should be coordinated with the health department, the medical, dental, and nursing professions, and the character building service of the church and home. Helpful relations should be maintained with parents so corrective action can be taken when they are discovered.

The school medical service is only part of the greater school health program. Improvements will come only when teachers, boards of education and public health officials work together. Public schools are a public trust, and students need supervision from every standpoint, educational, medical and dental. The classroom teacher should appreciate the fact that children of average intelligence who develop behavior difficulties or personality defects are harboring unhygienic emotional attitudes which are capable of correction or improvement. The development of habits, attitudes and knowledge favorable to good physical and mental health is a distinct challenge to present-day education.

Program Started in 1942

With this program in mind, Dallas Borough Board of Health presented the community service plan before the Dallas Borough Council and Dallas Board of Education in November, 1942. The Board of Health appreciated the encouragement and support that was given by Peter Clark, president of council at that time. Other members of Council who gave their approval were James Franklin, Morgan Wilcox, Joseph MacVeigh, Clyde Veitch, William Davis and James Ayre.

The same program was presented to the Board of Education, and its approval was unanimous. The members of the Board of Education in 1942 were Clyde Lapp, president, and John Durbin, William Baker, John Jeter and George Ayre. The Board of Education appointed Mrs. Grace Moore school nurse, and approved a series of health lectures to be given to the senior high school students by Dr. F. Budd Schooley.

At a later date the Board of Education made provisions for a health room. The room was redecorated and essential medical equipment was authorized to be purchased, as sterilizer for instruments, hypodermic needles and syringes. These were necessary for the Board of Health program of preventive inoculations for diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough and scarlet fever. The preventive inoculations were given to students from the first grade and continued through the grades and the high school students. Also, pre-school children from five months of age were given an opportunity to receive these preventive inoculations on a voluntary basis. Similar inoculations were encouraged and advised by the family physician. It was the optimistic hope of the Board of Health that all children would receive these preventive inoculations, either through their family physicians or through the Board of Health, and at least for diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough.

Health Films

To insure success of the health education program, Mrs. Charlotte E. Lance, Director of Health Education of The Angeline Elizabeth Kirby Memorial Health Center, was interviewed. Mrs. Lance arranged to secure the health educational films, and they were shown by Edward J. Pugh, manager of Kirby Health Center and chief health officer of Wilkes-Barre.

Health lectures and educational films have been shown for the following: Anatomy, physiology, habits and character, nutrition, tuberculosis, rheumatic fever (infective heart disease), syphilis and gonorrhea, pneumonia, infantile paralysis, care of the teeth, cancer, mental hygiene, alcohol, posture, vitamins, appendicitis, chorea, hernia, meningitis, bacteriology, tick fever, the house fly, personal hygiene, tularemia (rabbit fever), intestinal and body parasites, para-nasal sinuses, diabetes, malaria and artificial respiration. In 1944, Dr. Robert M. Bodycomb gave a talk on dental care, and Dr. J. C. Fleming lectured on the anatomy, physiology and pathology (disease) of the eye, ears, nose and throat.

The Board of Health program has been made possible and successful through the mutual understanding and cooperation of the Borough Council, the Board of Education and the Board of Health.

The Board of Health program is long-range, practical and logical. Its main objectives are to prevent disease, to recognize early disabilities and to obtain their correction through the family physician on an ethical basis, and to aid our children in their development of character and citizenship, that they may be physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

Property or Children Which is Most Important?

At the outset of our campaign for school director in Dallas Borough we want to take this opportunity to thank all of you who signed our petitions. The number who have offered us their support is most encouraging.

We want to make it clear that we ask and expect no support from any politicians or political organizations. Our whole concern is a better school system for our own children and the children of our neighbors.

No amount of pressure or persuasion could influence us to take the time from our businesses and professions to run for office unless we were convinced that the present policies of Dallas Borough Schools are not in keeping with the growth of this community.

Both of us are property owners and parents. Both of us live and work in Dallas 24 hours a day. Both of us have lived here for many years. We are interested in keeping our taxes down but we are more interested in giving our children the best education we can afford.

As businessmen we are convinced that the present board is interested in taxes and pays lip service to education. We are opposed to one-man domination of a board that for several years has served by appointment rather than by election.

We are opposed to factionalism and are convinced that five open minds on the board would more nearly reflect the opinion of the community than one-man domination.

We believe that the present majority is handicapped because none of the directors have any children in school.

We feel that these men have carried their antagonisms and prejudices from other community squabbles into their decisions as school directors.

We know that some people will not vote for us because they have no children and are not interested in paying for the education of those who have. Others will not vote for us because they have political debts to pay.

One candidate who signed both of our petitions was persuaded the next day to run for school director because a local politician promised to support him if he would run. That candidate is so naive and young in political ways that he does not yet know that he is in the race as a tool, without a chance of election, so that he can divide the vote. This division might permit one majority director to be elected and assure the continued one-man domination of the board.

But those of you who cannot afford to send your children to private schools and who want to see a change on the Dallas School Board will see through this trick and vote for Bodycomb and Richardson.

We say vote for both of us, because to vote for one of us would mean only humiliation for the man elected. Remember both of us must be elected in order to end one-man domination.

It seems presumptuous that men who either have no children in Dallas Borough Schools or send them to private schools should decide for the rest of us what sort of schools our children should attend.
