Editorially Speaking

The Passing Of The League Of Nations

By Congressman Daniel J. Flood

Mr. Speaker:

Today is the last session of the League of Nations in Geneva, and I should like to say to the shades of those who twenty-five years ago sponsored this League that it is not dead, that it is not forgotten, because from this League there is reborn a new spirit of international cooperation among the nations for world peace. We do not say good-bye to the idea of the League, but we say "Hail and farewell!" to a society of nations and welcome a new spirit of cooperation to the United Nations for collective security and world peace.

True it is that the first great opportunity of a practical plan for world peace was missed by the nations of the world, and this fact will linger in the minds of the nations' representatives in Geneva today as they ring the curtain down on the League of Nations. But we hasten to add that the curtain has already been rung up on a new society of nations, dedicated to the age-old dream of peace on earth good will among men and the prevailing of law and order in our society.

It is significant that this event takes place in the spring of the year. Because this new concept of world cooperation, as found in the charter of the United Nations, is in the springtime of its life, and all mankind hopes and prays that the budding United Nations will have the virility and the long life so fervently hoped for in all mankind. This is not the end of what the League of Nations was born to accomplish. This is not the finish of its embodied hope. Rather, this is the "end of the beginning," as Winston Churchill said not long ago of a changing phase during the war.

This is not the end of a family or the end of a line of ancestors with great traditions. This is not the terminal point of a proud genealogy with no off-spring to carry on. Because born from the trials and tribulations of the old League of Nations the newly born United Nations firmly hold aloft the torch of life for a new world, and it has already weathered and survived its first storm. The League was not a failure. Its success is proclaimed because of its successor, and the thing that lends emphasis to this fact is the much more significant fact that the greatest of the nations which did not join the old League is now the leader in the organization and the direction of the new United Nations—the United States of America.

The thing that is clear today as the member nations preside at the dissolution of the old League of Nations is the established fact that all nations and all peoples everywhere have reached the inescapable conclusion that peace among nations can result only from unity among those nations to achieve and maintain that goal.

Let us pause to salute the memory of the great Woodrow Wilson for his spirit and his followers must get great joy and satisfaction from this transmitting of the unfinished business of the League of Nations to the United Nations. This is vindication at its fullest. And finally, as was said by the brilliant writer of the New York Times, Anne O'Hare McCormick, "Woodrow Wilson will be remembered in the valedictory of the League, not as the leader of a lost cause, but as a prophet who was honored at last in his own country."

Truly can those who survive today and who were present at the original meeting a quarter of a century ago, pronounce from the fullness of their hearts the belief that: "They are not dead,

As we that are left shall die,
 Age shall not weary them,

Few Serious Forest Fires

Towerman Has Seen Only Seven So Far

So far the season looks favorable for a minimum number of forest fires, according to Herbert Lohmann, towerman at the Country Club Tower, operated by the State Department of Forests and Waters. Mr. Lohmann has been on duty eight hours a day since March 24, and since that time has observed only seven fires—most of them on the east side of the river and outside of his jurisdiction. The worst fire locally was on Luzerne Mountain.

Mr. Lohmann enjoys the lonely life of a towerman and spends considerable time reading. He likes especially to read poultry magazines. Few visitors get up to the tower except on Saturdays and Sundays. Then sometimes he has a dozen in a group.

On clear days, the observer says he can see ten to fourteen miles distance. Although there is always a breeze around his lofty perch even on quiet days, it is always comfortable in Mr. Lohmann's glass enclosed penthouse where he can study his maps and locate a fire almost instantly. Contact with other fire towers is maintained by telephone and short wave radio. Mr. Lohmann is a licensed operator and can contact any tower in about three minutes. He has been in charge of the Country Club Tower for six years.

Mason To Talk On Jungle War

Rice Will Show Films Of Naval Operations

War in the Jungles, a lecture in narrative form, will be presented by Attorney J. Gordon Mason, Tuesday night, April 30, at Dallas Borough High School Auditorium under the sponsorship of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Attorney Mason, a veteran of World War I, was stationed with the Pennsylvania Hospital Unit in Burma during World War II. He enlisted as a buck private, refused a commission, and at the completion of his service was discharged as a chief warrant officer, the highest non-commissioned officer in the army.

Attorney Mason's talks are informal and deal not only with the war against the enemy in the jungle but with the war against disease waged by the medical units. His talk is illustrated with hundreds of incidents of camp and hospital life and relationships with the natives.

With Attorney Mason will be Granville Rice, who was a navy photographer attached to Admiral Nimetz's staff. Mr. Rice will show motion pictures taken during some of the most important naval operations.

Those who have heard Attorney Mason say that his story of his personal experiences is one of the most entertaining and informative talks that they have heard given by any one on the war.

A nominal admission will be charged, the entire amount being turned over to the Parent-Teacher Association.

YOUNG JOE POLACHY HAS DAY OF ALL AROUND BAD LUCK

When he tried to plug in his bed-side radio last Wednesday evening, young Joe Polachy, aged ten, son of Postmaster and Mrs. Polachy of Huntsville road, ripped the floor wire loose and received painful burns to both hands. Joe, who had had a bad day anyway and been sent to bed to do his homework, said the current gripped so that he couldn't open either hand—much as he tried. Screams of pain brought his mother to the bedroom where young Joe had finally managed to free himself. Generous doses of amertan helped make things right with the world again.

Teachers Want Pay Increases Above Minimum

Kingston Township Teachers' Group Meets With Directors

Probing the possibility of obtaining additional salary increases amounting to $3 a day or $540 annually, Kingston Township teachers met Friday with the Board of Education to study the school budget and to determine whether the District is able to pay more than the $100 increase which will be granted under State Law.

Chairman of the group was Pearl Averett, who outlined the teachers' problems created by increased living costs. Other spokesmen for the teachers who are the heads of families said that it is impossible to maintain the standards expected on present salaries.

Directors, all of whom were present, listened attentively to the teachers' arguments and countered by explaining that township taxes will have to be raised at least 5 mills to take care of the $100 salary increases already granted each teacher in the new budget.

President Ralph Hazeltine pointed out that the Board has followed a program of improving teacher salaries wherever possible and that the past five years the salaries of some of the teachers have been increased as much as 70 per cent. It was also explained that Kingston Township is one of the few Fourth Class Districts in the area where sick leaves are granted. This item alone will amount to more than $500 this year. Other teachers are paid for supervising extra-curricular activities and in many instances this adds materially to teacher's salaries. Mr. Hazeltine said this item amounts to $900 a year.

Although the meeting lasted for several hours, no decisions were reached, the consensus of opinion being that taxes will have to be raised 5 to 10-mills even without additional salary increases beyond those already granted by the State.

The teachers admitted that they had entered the meeting under the impression that the State was taking care of the $100 increase and that the school board could therefore, do something for the teachers on its own account.

Under present Law teacher's salaries will increase $100 annually until a minimum salary of $2,100 is reached. Salary schedules in Kingston Township now range from $1,600 to $2,150, the average salary being $1,800. Some teacher salaries are higher than appears in the budget because of remuneration for supervising extra curricular activities. In one instance this amounts to $350; and in others to $100 and $50.

Borough Schools Start Physical Examinations
