The jar is opened for use, when sugar may be more plentiful, or when the small amount involved places no serious strain on the sugar budget. Small outlays are always easier to manage than large ones.

Fruit juice for future jelly-making may be canned without sugar, and made up as desired. Freshly made jelly, in common with freshly made chili sauce, is more appetizing than jelly which has been gathering dust for a year on the shelves in the basement storage cabinet. And there is another advantage, in that the sterilized juice is already measured. A quart jar contains four measured cups of juice. A quart of ready prepared juice can be made up into jelly in no time at all, because a small quantity boils faster than a large kettleful. And the necessary sugar is not used until actually needed, a distinct gain.

Pears may be cold-packed with a very thin syrup, and extra sugar added at serving time if necessary.

From present indications, commercially packed fruit will bring an astronomical price. It will pay every woman who has fruit in her orchard to can as much of it as possible, using ingenuity instead of sugar to preserve it.

The law of supply and demand is a great stabilizer, and almost as difficult to repeal as the law of gravity. If everybody who could obtain fruit for home canning would do so, making a genuine effort to stock her own shelves completely for the coming year without benefit of the commercial pack, the demand for canned fruit would decrease and the price would inevitably come down. There are a great many people who are so situated that home canning is practically impossible, and for these people the commercial product is a necessity. In this section of Pennsylvania we are fortunately located. There is plenty of fruit, and most localities are sufficiently rural so that it can be obtained at the peak of its goodness.

With a hungry world to feed, it is of prime importance that we waste nothing that can be turned into food. Individual efforts may look picayune in comparison with the vast necessity, a veritable drop in the bucket, but it is well to remember that the bucket is filled with individual drops.

Poet's Corner

In loving memory of my husband who passed away September 8, 1945.

One year ago today, dear Dad,
You went away and left me sad,
Left this world of sin and care
To be with loved ones over there.

I miss you so as the days go by,
And oftentimes, I stand and gaze at
the sky;
Sometimes it seems your face I see Looking down from the clouds on me.

Last night you came and stood by my bed
With a halo of light above your head,
And your smile was the same as it used to be
When you were here on earth with
me.

And then I awoke with a sudden start
And found myself with an aching heart—
It was only a dream, and dreams
don't come true
But it was nice to believe I had talked with you.
—Mrs. Clara Grose.

Football Roundup

In an effort to get the rather sketchy picture that interscholastic football forms at the present, we have been rewarded with the following pre-season dope:

Lake Township—Lake gave us some news we've been waiting years to hear when they told us. They may resume play in the Back Mountain league next year. Dave Price, of Nanticoke, their new Physical Education man and former footballer, is planning a program of intramural competition this fall. With the likely prospects he hopes to find by way of the program and some encouragement all around, we can look forward to Laketon being very much in the football picture next season.

Dallas Township—The Township boys are, for our money, a team to watch this year. Principal Kuhnert refused to get too enthusiastic, maintaining that "with the breaks" the Township "stands a 50-50 chance of coming out near the top of the heap." However, with coaches Robert Dolbear and John Rosser back from a three-year stint in service and seven of last year's regulars again rarin' to play, the prexy's statement sounds more, to us, like an understatement!

A total of 25 out for the squad includes these returning members of last year's varsity: Hughes, H.B.; Tondora, Q.B.; Fowler and Dunham at the tackles; Veitch and Kuhnert at guard and Wallace at center.

Don't forget, we told you so. Dallas Borough—Turning from the role of optimist to that of philosopher, we've received the bad news that Dallas Borough, due to a lack of equipment, will not be able to play this year. Always a hard team to beat and good sports to the last whistle, the Borough boy's absence will leave a big gap in the league. We hope to see all obstacles overcome and a Borough team in the lineup again come next fall.

Lehman—Over at the old Alma Mater we found Mike Stark, the new coach, in something not quite resembling jubilation. The Scotties have three or four boys back who have played football. Outside of that they have what Mike fondly calls a "green team—but rough." Out of a squad of thirty-five, though, there are apt to be some surprises. We'll be watching Lehman.

Kingston Township—At K.T. they present quite a different picture. Not only has Coach Tom Jenkins stolen a march on the rest of the schools by beginning practice two weeks ago, he has an even bigger surprise in a nucleus of five of last year's hard hitting team. Coupled with the thirty others out for a first string position, that could mean something. We're as reluctant as Mr. Kuhnert to stick our neck out, but we hazard a slight guess, right here, that K.T. is once more going to be a tough customer.

There it is, you rabid football fans, all wrapped up in a bundle and delivered to the mailbox. Now all you have to do is find out when your favorite team plays its first game—then get out there and ROOT!

Many things can be happening here in Pennsylvania Week. We should have special Pennsylvania programs in our schools and churches. Orchestras should play Pennsylvania music. Stores, hotels, banks and others should display locally made Pennsylvania paintings, photographs of Pennsylvania scenery, etc. Hotel and restaurant menus should feature Pennsylvania foods. Clubs should have speakers on Pennsylvania topics.

Write for the "Pennsylvania Week Manual." This booklet suggests almost a hundred different things we can do to make Pennsylvania Week a tremendous success. It tells how to organize the celebration... who can help and what can be done.
