Editorially Speaking:

Time To Become Concerned

As a property owner and taxpayer this newspaper is concerned with the recent turn of events in the management of Dr. Henry M. Laing Fire Company.

We are concerned because we want the best possible fire protection this community can afford. We know we are not going to get it unless the people who own real estate and foot the fire company bills, take an aggressive

There is no room for politics and small town prejudices in the Dr. Henry M. Laing Fire Company. Nor do personal likes and dislikes or ambitions have any place in its management. There is too much at stake to let the fire company be the pawns of those whose responsibility to the community ceases after their personal ambitions or whims are satisfied.

We remember only too well the days in 1939 when the Dr. Henry M. Laing Fire Company had fallen to such low estate that it was a question whether the company could longer exist either as an effective fire fighting organization or as a social club It was honeycombed with politics; leadership was irresponsible and there was less than $15 in the treasury. That was when a group of concerned property owners headed by Burgess H. A. Smith took the bull by the horns and determined to put the company back on its feet—not as a social organization or a plaything for youngsters but as an organization that could render effective fire protection in Dallas and the surrounding communities.

Once the community saw what was up, it immediately, came to the aid of these men with substantial contributions and moral support. Fred Kiefer and Howell Rees wrote theatrical productions that played to capacity houses. As money poured in, physical equipment of the company was put in ship shape. Harry Ohlman, as president, put through several reforms and placed the company on an efficient business basis.

Through his efforts and the assistance of others he raised hundreds of dollars from surrounding townships. Alone, he worked in Harrisburg obtaining money for the company relief fund.

Today Dr. Henry M. Laing Fire Company has $2,088.44 of working capital in its treasury. There is $3,500 in the Relief Fund Treasury. All bills are paid, and equipment is in excellent shape.

Best of all, under Ohlman's leadership and with the cooperation of Borough Council, surveys of the community were made and fire hydrants have now been installed at strategic locations so that fire insurance rates have been greatly lowered for more than seventy-five per cent of the property owners in Dallas. A series of fire schools were conducted where active firemen could obtain scientific instruction on the best methods of combating all types of fires, and regular fire drills were conducted with the equipment to familiarize fire fighters with every aspect of its use.

Today those who own property and have something to protect are proud of their fire company and have confidence in its ability to do more than squirt water at a fire and smash furniture with a pick-axe. Fighting fire is a scientific business and not a picnic.

The position the fire company holds in the community has been built up by hard work and intelligent planning -not by care-free rattle headed youngsters or sloppy thinking, or by those, who without fire fighting training or without digging down in their jeans to foot the bills, jump on the fire truck every time the siren blows in order to be off on a lark.

Attempt To Rob ROGER BABSON SEES NO HOPE FOR AGREEMENT WITH RUSSIA Kuehns Foiled

Fernbrook Youth Is In Custody Of Police

A fifteen-year-old Fernbrook boy who attempted to rob Kuehn's Drug Store on Christmas Eve has been released in the custody of Chief of Police Russell Honeywell on the youth's promise to report weekly to police and to return to classes in Dallas Borough schools after the Christmas recess.

The hearing was before Burgess George Williams who warned that further deviation from the straight and narrow path will lead to juvenile court.

The attempted robbery took place at 1:20 A.M. Christmas morning as Karl Kuehn, proprietor of the drug unless definite steps are taken for crease. store, waited in the prescription room of his establishment for fires to burn up after mechanics had repaired a stoker that had been out of operation for several hours.

Mr. Kuehn said the stoker men remained in the building to check the drafts and let the store warm up before setting the thermostat.

As he reclined in a chair, he heard a key rattle in the back door lock and on investigation saw through the door window, someone trying to gain entry. Without waiting for the intruder to open the door, Mr. Kuehn slammed his fist through the window at the robber who ran away through an alley. Mr. Kuehn recognized him and called his name.

Sometime later while Mr. Kuehn was dressing his cut hand in his apartment above the Frantz store, the boy came to him and admitted that he had tried to enter the store to steal Christmas presents for his parents. He said he thought Mr. and Mrs. Kuehn had plenty of money and wouldn't miss the few presents he was about to take.

Couple Observes 54th Anniversary

Sherman Hildebrants Married Christmas Eve

Surrounded by members of their Mr. and Mrs mmediate family. Sherman W. Hildebrant quietly celebrated their fifty-fourth wedding anniversary Christmas eve in the homestead at East Dallas where Mr. Hildebrant was born eighty, years ago.

The couple was married in Derr Memorial Church, Wilkes-Barre, in 1892. Mrs. Hildebrant, now in her seventies, is the former Jane Fisher of Wilkes-Barre. She is hale and hearty and, rising early in the morning, sets a lively pace for her daughter-in-law and granddaughters throughout the day.

She tends the chickens, milks the cows, and churns the butter for the household. Besides all this, one might even find her in the garden or fields when Pa and John are short of help.

Mr. Hildebrant is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hildebrant who came from New Jersey and built the homestead. He, like his wife, fills every day with plenty of good hard work, keeping up with the youngest in the fields from daylight until dark.

The Hildebrants have two children living, Mrs. Marian Harter of Trucksville, and John at home. Another daughter, Beatrice Roushey of Fernbrook, died during the influenza epidemic. There are four grandchildren: Marian, Beatrice, Frances and Jean Hildebrant of East Dallas and Sherman Harter, now with the U.S. Army.
