Granddaughter of Idetown Couple Receives Reward For Honesty

Dorothy Ann Seida, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Seida of Denver, Colo., and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith of Idetown, received national recognition recently when she was elected first girl member of the Honor Club sponsored by Central Bank & Trust Company of Denver.

Dorothy, whose mother, the former Lydia Smith of Idetown, was a Lehman High School teacher for four years, won membership in the Club because she found and returned a purse containing $160 to its owner who had dropped it when she got out of a taxi cab. Dorothy found the purse as she walked home from St. Catherine's school where she is a second grade pupil.

For her honesty and courtesy she received a $5 award and a one-year activity ticket in the Denver Y.W.C.A. She also appeared on a radio program. Although she is the only girl and the youngest of the club's sixteen members, she found the second largest sum of money.

After her election she was surprised when a Boston lady sent her "Congratulations, darling" and a copy of the Christian Science Monitor containing her picture and a feature article "Denver Children Find Honesty Pays." Dorothy's picture also appeared in a National banking magazine.

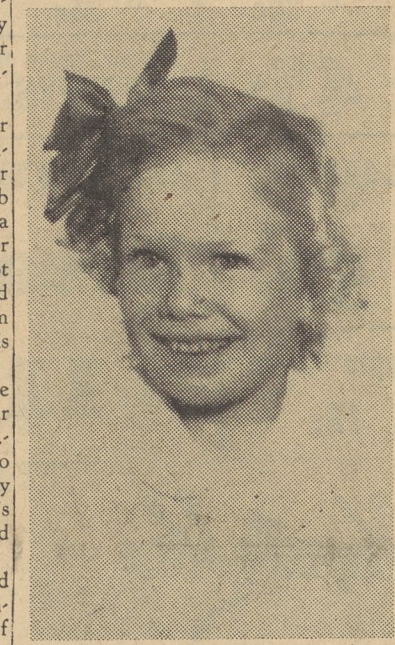

The Denver Honor Award Club originated when Rodney Poole, 13, an orphan who lives in Colorado's State Home for Dependent Children, found a purse containing $270 and hunted until he found the owner.

The spectacle of a child dazzled by more money than he had ever seen, doggedly tracing down the person who'd lost it struck T. Arthur Williams, assistant cashier of Denver's Central Bank & Trust Company and head of the bank's unofficial Department of Finding Unusual People and Doing Something About It.

Mr. Williams didn't expect the club to grow very fast but it has fooled him. Children began finding and returning wallets, purses and valuable papers all over the place and popping up for awards. The rules were made, pretty strict. The valuables found and returned must contain currency or coin.

"An envelope or a wallet containing only checks or bonds or documents means little to a child and puts no strain on his honesty," says Mr. Williams. "Money is different. Every child understands money. It takes real stamina for a child to turn back a purse with money in it. That's why we reserve our Honor Club for such children."

Dorothy's grandmother is very proud of her little granddaughter who is also the champion speller of her class and received a nice prize for not being spelled down shortly after she was elected to the Honor Club. She regrets only two things: that Dorothy is so far away—she moved to Denver about two years ago—and that she can't attend Lehman schools where all of grandmother Smith's seven children except Katherine, in first year high, have graduated.

Alice, now Mrs. George Smith of Wilkes-Barre, was the first to graduate and then attended Wilkes-Barre Business College; then Dorothy's mother, Lydia, after graduation attended Blomberg State Teachers' College and became a teacher. Then graduated in order, Clark, a graduate of Wyoming Seminary and now manager of a store in Pottsville; Rev. Harry of Hampton, N.J., who won a $1,400 scholarship to Drew University from Lehman schools; Kenneth, Berne, Pa., who was in the army and is now attending college; Naomi, at home, and Katherine now entering her Sophomore year at Lehman.

Pruett, Mrs. Dan Robinhold, Mrs. Milford Shaver, Mrs. Howard Bailey; tickets, Mrs. Ord Trumbower, Mrs. Alton Sprout, Mrs. Harry Ohlman; chairs, Mrs. Jack Barnes, Mrs. Ord Trumbower; table service, Mrs. Raymond Kuhnert, Mrs. Eugene Lazarus; table supervision, Mrs. Daniel Richards, Mrs. John Yaple, Mrs. Robert Van Horn, Mrs. Donald Evans, Mrs. L. L. Sixth Girvan Son Is In Floor Covering Business In Alaska

Mr. and Mrs. John Girvan, Lake Street, have reason to be proud of their sons—and daughters, too—but they are especially proud to have had six sons follow in the footsteps of their father in the floor covering business in all parts of the world.

John A. Girvan, the daddy of them all, has been laying carpet and linoleum for forty-two years having learned his trade with William "Billy" Britt, known to all leading citizens of Wyoming Valley. He was the father of Mrs. Girvan.

Of the Girvan sons, John W. is in the carpet and linoleum business in Portland, Oregon; Francis is located in Kingston, and Robert, who was killed in Italy during the late war, followed the floor covering business for one and a half years in Puerto Rico, installing tile in the government barracks, before he entered the service.

Joseph is in business in Norristown, Pa., and Thomas is employed by his brother John in Portland. About two months ago, Billy, the sixth son, decided he needed a change and took a trip to Oregon to visit his two brothers. He was there only a few weeks when he received a contract to put down linoleum and tile in Fairbanks, Alaska. The Alaska Floor Covering Company paid his plane fare. After eight hours he arrived in Fairbanks. He wrote his mother this week, "Mom, they like my work up here and I am going to show them the good work a Girvan can do."

Billy Britt might well be proud of his grandsons. He came from Wilmington, Del., to Wilkes-Barre when he was a young man and was one of the first carpet and linoleum men in the community. He was employed by Orr's Fair located on East Market street until he went in business for himself.

It really looks as though the Girvan's will be covering floors for many years to come since Francis has four young sons who are anxious to follow in the footsteps of great-grandpa Britt, grandpa Girvan and pop.

John Leidinger is back in the repairing of harness, bags, golf bags, and everything in leather; also zippers put in and repaired.

SPRING is on the way—and you're probably planning once again for a thorough house-cleaning. But after you've scrubbed and cleaned every nook and cranny, and every wall and floor and piece of furniture is sparkling, what next? What more can you do to bring spring into

First of all, down will come the winter drapes and curtains—and up will go light and airy bits of fluff in keeping with sunny days and balmy breezes. If you desire simplicity in your curtains, make them of cotton nets, organdy, voile, marquisette, dotted swiss or batiste. But if you desire elegance, make them of nylon, lace, fine net, chiffon, point d'esprit or embroidered organdy.

There are several ways you can decorate your floors, if you take up your rugs for the summer months. Linoleum or tile floors are practical and colorful in all rooms and you can always use scatter rugs at various points. These floorings come in such a variety of color combinations and designs that today no floor need ever be guilty of drabness. Or you can use full size fibre rugs in cool colors to replace your winter rugs.

Now for another way to take up the bright garment of spring. Slip covers are a year 'round investment because once you see how they rejuvenate old or worn furniture you'll keep them on all year. Some of the most popular materials for slip covers are chintz, corduroy, cretonne, gabardine, homespun, percale, twill and denim. It's wise to buy pre-shrunk material and then you'll have no trouble washing or dry-cleaning your covers when ever necessary. Slip cover smartness is within the scope of every budget if you make your own—and you can do this easily if you follow directions.

If you would like to try your hand at making some, you'll be interested in the leaflet we are offering today. Once you discover how easy they are to make, you'll decide that no chair should be without one. This leaflet includes directions for slip covers for side chairs. These chairs take on an important look dressed in floor length slip covers with pleated or ruffled skirts. Simpler covers—small ones for a dining room chair back and seat—greatly improve the appearance of a room and increase the durability of your chairs. If you would like to receive this leaflet, just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Needlework Department of this paper, asking for Leaflet No. S 13-25. SLIP COVERS FOR SIDE CHAIRS.
