

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

More and more I get dubious about where we are coming out--this U.S.A. I mean--this land of the free and easy. This prodigal goings-on of our boss-men in Govt., it is past being something to shrug off. Every page the paper tells about more cash being dished into this or into that--no end.

Today there are 2 items. One is for $43,431,000 bucks for the Hungry Horse power house in Montana, and the other is for a 64,000,000 bucks loan to the UN for a new building. And it is a 100 to 1 shot that neither of the loans will ever be paid off. A typical day, I call it. But some of these times we are going to get the feeling that the camel had on that final day when the last straw was piled on--and his legs buckled. The wait may not be too long.

But there is always a hope that maybe Mr. Massachusetts's Joe Martin or that old Virginia gent, Mr. Byrd, or some other such level-headed person who figures that the U.S.A. is still worth saving and knows how to wrangle it, will be our next boss-man. There is no law against hoping--so folks, join in, let's hope-- also vote.

Yours with the low down,
JO SERRA

Health Examinations
Given In K. T. Schools

For the second year, all students, faculty, and employees of the Kingston Township Schools have received a complete medical and dental examination.

When the State law was passed there was a question of how dental or medical corrections could be met for students whose parents were not financially able to provide the correction. During the two years the new State Health program has been in effect, necessary corrections have been made through financial aid from local organizations and from the State Department of Public Assistance.

Infantile Paralysis Epidemics Have Struck State Five Times

By Pennsylvania News Service
Harrisburg, May 6th-- Infantile paralysis epidemics have struck Pennsylvania five times in a generation and in 32 years have touched 12,658 persons, State Headquarters of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis said today.

Pointing out that medical authorities call 20 cases per 100,000 population an epidemic, the Foundation said that "the rate has been repeatedly exceeded in many of our counties."

Thanks and appreciation for the "splendid financial support" accorded the March of Dimes drive for funds to fight polio, which recently ended in Pennsylvania, were expressed by the Foundation which warned at the same time however that "polio is a continuous story in Pennsylvania. It is always with us, though no one knows where it will strike nor how severely."

Highest toll of infantile paralysis in Pennsylvania occurred in 1916 when 2181 cases were reported. In 1932, a total of 1111 were stricken while in 1942 there were 742 cases of which number 102 were in York County alone.

In 1944, eighteen northern tier counties felt the impact of an epidemic when the State had 1456 cases. In Tioga County, where 105 persons were stricken, one of the highest case rates in the country was reported-- 359 per 100,000 population.

More recently, in 1945 the incidence was higher than usual, with a reported 783 cases, while in the following year a total of 341 cases were reported, and reports indicate that the total for last year will be slightly lower.
