Farmers Attend Kunkle Meeting

Northeastern farmers can save money on feed by making heavy use of home-grown grain now, rather than next winter when feed costs are expected to be lower as a result of the new 3 1/2 billion bushel corn crop, Garland Clarke, Ithaca, declared at a meeting of farmers at Kunkle Community Hall, Monday night.

The finest grain crop in years is being harvested in this territory, Mr. Clarke said, pointing out that this, together with the greatest grain crop in all U.S. history, leaves little doubt but that poultrymen and dairymen will have reasonable feed prices this winter.

"We will not get the full effect of these large grain crops until October when new corn moves to market in heavy volume," he said, adding that "old corn is still scarce and high-priced and, as a result, is tending to hold feed prices from declining to Government support levels."

The best time to make full use of home-grown grains is now, Mr. Clarke emphasized, urging that new oats and wheat be substituted for corn in scratch grain, dairy rations and poultry mashes.

George Rice of Dallas, presided over the meeting. The program also included a full-color, sound motion picture entitled "From the Roots", which told the story of how farmers have worked together from the barn raisings of early days on down to their modern cooperatives which they use to secure their farm production supplies and to sell farm products.
