Local Girls Attend Convention At York

Several girls and their advisers will attend the fourth annual state convention of the Pennsylvania Future Homemakers of America in York today and tomorrow, April 1 and 2. They are Grace Barall, voting delegate and Mary Alice Lewis of Lehman and Marjorie Wolfe, voting delegate and Treva Traver of Lake Township. Their advisers, Miss Ruth Shellhamer and Miss Margaret Lukasavage accompanied them.

This year an "all-state" girls' chorus will be organized with members from every part of Pennsylvania. Treva Traver of Lake Township and Mary Alice Lewis of Lehman Township will have the honor of being charter members of this organization.

It is expected that approximately 500 FHA members will attend the convention. They will represent the 9,000 members in the 270 chapters.

Highlights of the program, planned by FHA girls will include the following: the first performance of the State FHA Chorus; a talk by Walter C. Trout, Art Supervisor in Hannah Penn High School, York, who will give "An Historic Sketch of York"; and a talk by Beryl Water, Home and Food Editor of "Seventeen" Magazine, who will speak on the topic, "Parties Win and Influence People."

The general sessions will be devoted to business and discussions concerning state and national projects, earning degrees of achievement, and the election of officers. The annual banquet on Friday evening will be followed by a jamboree. The Saturday luncheon will feature Ann Dellafield and her models from the Hudnut Beauty Salon, who will give a cosmetic demonstration. The fashion revue will feature June Hamilton Rhodes of the Hand Knitting Institute, New York City. Miss Rhodes will use FHA girls for models in the fashion show which is a closing feature of the convention.
