Impressed with the fact that no water was used in preparing the meal and I used to wonder how the coffee was conceived. Apple-sauce was usually on the menu but had been made earlier in the day and forced through the ricer, which made two legitimate reasons why no normal person could keep house without one.

My last dinner was the one I took Norm to. One girl had the bright idea of letting the husbands in on a demonstration and we concluded later that it hadn't been such a bright idea after all. Norm and one of his pals we call "Gloves" came close to causing a riot in the hostess's kitchen. They had become bored with the before dinner speech so wandered out to the kitchen to see for themselves what was cooking in what. They proceeded to lift the lids off every pot on the stove making possible the escape of most of the precious vitamins we had been hearing about; not to mention the odor of rebellious cabbage; which up to that moment had been a carefully guarded secret. The salesman cut his talk short and gave the hostess a very desperate "let's dish up the dinner" look then tore out to the kitchen. By that time Norm and "Gloves" were sampling the coffee and volunteered the information that it was as good as Salvation Army coffee any day.

To give credit where credit is due I will say that both Norm and Gloves bought their unhappy wives a ricer and then they suggested that we all go down to the diner for hamburgers.

The brush demonstrations will not be discussed here for the obvious reason that they always remind some one of a joke. Suffice it's to say there is a brush for every occasion but not necessarily an occasion for every brush.

now one of their main industries.

I haven't told you about the artists who never tire of painting its lovely scenery and the summer stock companies who inhabit every old barn. Summer stock was born on Cape Cod.

I hope I have aroused your interest enough so that you will get the book and read the rest of it yourself.

Some beautiful spring day I am going to back the old Chevrolet out of the garage and gather my nice husband, who doesn't mind stopping at antique shops, borrow "Down Cape Cod" from Miriam (I won't stay over two weeks) and follow its map on places to see on the Cape and return to find some places we have missed. Better come along. Anyway, do read the book.

So here's hoping,
Your friend,

Jean D. Hutchison
P.S. Maybe we could get some new ideas for the Auction Sale.
