Tucked away in an Archive in the Conservation Department at Harrisburg is a map of State Game Lands No. 57. This reservation of a million acres has one entrance five miles west of Noxen. Inside the gate another four or five miles beyond Dinstels quite a large section recorded on the official state map as Hell's Kitchen. How it got its name is a story worth telling.

Years before the State took over Squire Ralph Davis and his hunting pals of Harveys Lake built a small cabin in this wild country on North Mountain and used it as a nightly stopover if each man in the hunting party failed to bag his deer on the first day.

Many a year when five men went up there to hunt they would come home with as many deer the second or third day and the Squire has photographs of the animals, hanging in front of his home, to prove it. Such good times were had at this cabin, known as the Davis Stopover, that often the boys would get together even out of hunting season, drive to Dinstels, and walk five miles to the cabin, light a fire in the wood stove and just sit around talking of old times and playing a little high, low, Jack, or shoot crows and come back to the lake next day full of exuberance and tales of wild animals seen, and bear tracks that were followed just for the fun of getting out in the woods and tramping around.

Twenty-three years ago, in 1926, three years before this wild country became State land, the Squire, Calvin Branon, Gene May, Charles Frantz and Raymond Smith decided to take a hike up to Davis' Stopover cabin. They intended to spend the weekend there just chewing the fat, looking around and having a good time as men are apt to do, but which would bore women to death. It was early spring, with leaves partly out and a beautiful fine sunny morning. The car trip to Dinstels was uneventful even over the rough road that has since been improved by the CCC boys and the WPA. There wasn't a happier quintet in the State of Pennsylvania that morning as they stepped from the car and started their five-mile hike to the cabin. Deer bounded away almost at their feet, fresh bear tracks were followed, thirty different bird species were noted, rabbits scooted through the brush and porcupines lumbered across their path. All was well with the world. The sun was shining. It was spring.

"When we get to the cabin," said the Squire, "We'll get the old wood stove going and cook some grub, I'm getting hungry, and we better get going, I just felt a drop of rain."

"Oh! that's not rain," retorted Ray Smith, "It's the dew falling off the young leaves."

"No, it's rain alright," advised Cal Branon, "Let's get on our way, it's a good thing we're only a mile from the cabin."

But it was too late, the rain came down in torrents. In a few minutes the cloud burst soaked the men through. Their pants were clinging to their legs. Their underclothing was as wet as though they had just emerged from the lake fully dressed, but they plodded on thinking of that fire and getting dry.

At last they reached the cabin and the Squire unlocked the door and they all pushed in to—now, just a minute, we are getting a little ahead of our story.

It seems that the Squire, the autumn before turned the key in the lock and left the cabin in ship-shape, but in the interval, some porcupines got hungry. These pesky critters had discovered that the rubberized covering on the roof of the cabin was a delicacy that they couldn't resist. They had climbed up on a woodpile back of the cabin, and onto the roof and ate the

BEAUMONT

The Lend A Hand Club had a most enjoyable evening recently at the high school cafeteria where their husbands were dinner guests. In collaboration with the Cancer Drive a movie on the same was shown by Mr. Whipple, county chairman.

Local "Isaac Waltons" are displaying their hauls for the opening of the season. Here's a poem for the same that should be shared with you—

Out Fishin'
A feller isn't thinkin' mean,
Out Fishin'
His thoughts are mostly good and clean

Out Fishin'
He does not knock his fellow men,
Or harbor any grudges then.
A feller's at his finest when
Out Fishin'

A feller's glad to be a friend,
Out Fishin'

The brotherhood of rod and line
An' sky and stream is always fine
Men come real close to God's design,
Out Fishin'

A feller isn't plotting schemes
Out Fishin'

He's only busy with his dreams,
Out Fishin'

His livery is a coat of tan,
His creed to do the best he can,
A feller's always mostly man,
Out Fishin'

Miss Rosemary Kozak entertained for Miss Audrey Crispell, a bride elect last Thursday evening.

The high school baseball team is off to a good start for the season. The first league game with Meshoppen was ours by a score of 7 - 0.

The Cancer Drive is under way throughout the nation, but as yet no local contributions have been received by Mrs. Edward MacDougall, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. Alden Dietz, or William A. Austin who make up the local committee. Please "strike back"!

It's pleasing to report the final count of the "Red Cross Drive" put us "over the top" for we met our quota of $168.

May fifth has been chosen as the date for the grade school operetta, "The Magic Beanstalk."

The Charles Goodwin family spent Easter at Budd Lake, N. J. with their daughters and families. No local "Isaac Waltons" are boasting of their limits the first day, although some sixteen inches have been placed in the frying pans.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Richards have returned from Florida looking most fit and sun-tanned.

covering down to the bare boards. The winter snows had piled on the roof and warped the boards. The spring rains came and swished through the place. Mud gathered on the floor.

The five men entered, they couldn't have been any wetter. They tried to start a fire, but the damp wood smoked them out in the rain again. At 2 o'clock in the morning the storm stopped, and the men managed to get some dry wood from under the cabin and rekindle a fire, only to find that the stove refused to draw because of the damp treatment it had received all winter.

"Listen," growled Gene May, "Do you call this stove and the dish cabinet along side it a kitchen? It's a devil's abode, that's what it is. Hell's kitchen I call it—HELL'S KITCHEN!"

And Hell's Kitchen it has been ever since. It's on a map at Harrisburg which proves it, and everybody speaks of it as Hell's Kitchen even now, long after the cabin has fallen into decay, but only five men and Al, Himself knew how it got that name, and now you do, too.

Here's the PLOW you need for breaking sod

The Dearborn plow is made for the Ford Tractor. It has no wheels, axle, tongue, clutch, springs or levers... but good sturdy beams and fine bases, coulters and jointers. With Ford Hydraulic Touch Control, holding right depths is easy. Easy adjustments. Only three grease gun fittings to lubricate. See us if you want a new plowing experience.
