YOU KNOW ME BY Al, Himself

Dear Editor of the Dallas Post:

We apologize for not getting our column in this week. We have had a very hectic week-end what with taking the Boy Scouts on a hike Saturday to Rickett's Glen, painting and putting in screens, planting our flowers between rains, finding our wife's lost pocketbook, getting a home for a coon white cat, almost buying a garage, and denying to our neighbors that we anticipated taking a trip to Europe. It all started early in the week when we asked our wife to put up a lunch Saturday as we were taking the scouts on a hike. "Oh! Al," she says, "Surely you are not going to leave me on your day off, in the middle of my house-cleaning just to go on a hike."

flowers to plant, and the dock and float to get in the water.

"Yep," we replied, "we're going." Then Frank Jackson called and invited us to accompany him to see the Forty-Fort Flower Show Friday night, and we so wanted to go, but we told him that it could not be done, we had too much work to do.

When we hung up the phone, our wife asked: "Who was that?" "Frank Jackson."

"What did he want?" "He wanted us to go to the Forty-Fort Flower Show, but we said no."

"Well, for goodness sake, why don't you go? It will do you good, and Mr. Jackson would like your company." We just looked at her, and refused to call Frank back to say our wife would let us go for fear that he would think we were henpecked.

Then Saturday eight boys showed up at nine o'clock and we had a delightful ride to Rickett's Glen and a walk through the eight miles of one of the most beautiful spots in the State of Pennsylvania. What a day for a hike, not too hot, or too cool, and the sun shining through the trees just enough, but we'll write about the Glen some other time. It is sufficient to say now that we were alone with God and eight antelopes that scrambled up and down deep gorges—the regular path wasn't for them—to cause us often to wonder what we could say to their parents when we brought home the crippled bodies. But nothing alarming happened and we got home around four.

Just as we entered the house the phone rang and when we answered, a lady asked if this was the home of Mrs. Alan G. Kistler who had lost her wallet? We answered that this was her home, but we knew nothing about a lost wallet as our wife and daughter were shopping in Wilkes-Barre. "Well," said the lady, "I found the wallet and it has $22.00 in it and your wife's personal cards."

"We asked the lady would she call back as we did not think our wife would like us to know she lost her pocketbook until after she recovered it. The lady did, and our wife got her wallet back. Then we were told all about it. Next we were interrupted in our screen painting by a girl that phoned that she wanted to give our Coon white cat a good home.

"What's that?" we asked, "we haven't any cat." "Well," said the girl, "you have an advertisement in the Dallas Post this week, giving your telephone number that you want to find a home for a cat as the party that owns the cat is going to Europe."

Just then our wife came home and saved the day by grabbing the phone and explaining that she put the advertisement in your paper for a friend of hers. Then we were called away from our garden work by someone who telephoned that he heard we were interested in buying a garage.

No, we said wearily, we have two garages now. When we took our usual passenger, Mrs. Poe Allen in to work Monday morning she informed us that she saw through an advertisement in the Dallas Post that she would soon have to look for another driver as we were contemplating taking a trip to Europe.

"What's that?" we gasped. By that time we were too tired to deny anything. "Well, she explained, "you had an advertisement in the Dallas Post this week that you wanted to find a good home for a—"

"A Coon white cat," we finished.

"Yes," she said meekly. "Well, it wouldn't surprise us a bit if we wind up this week-end by going to Europe; but when we get home tonight we'll find out more about it, our wife is keeping a lot of things from us lately.

Let's hope, Howard, our next week-end will be calmer, and you'll get your copy early.
