State To Permit Killing Of Does

Counties, However, May Close Season On Them

The 1949 hunting season in Pennsylvania roughly follows the pattern of other years, the Pennsylvania Game Commission said this week, but of interest to nimrods is the fact that this year there will be one day open season on antlerless deer.

The Commission said: "Again there is the necessity for balancing the herd and reducing it consistent with the natural food supply, thereby relieving farmers, nurserymen and orchardists of much damage by deer. Therefore a one-day state-wide antlerless season was declared for December 10."

The season for antlered deer opens November 28 and closes December 9. The Commission warned that both an antlered and antlerless deer cannot be taken during the season—only one kind is permitted.

Bear season opens November 14 and closes five days later on November 19.

Regarding the open day for antlerless deer, the Commission pointed out that individual counties have the right under a new law passed by the 1949 Legislature, to close the day within county boundaries.

Small game season opens November 1 and for rabbits, squirrels, pheasants and turkeys closes November 26.
