

First New Holland Field Forage Harvester On Display

The first public display in this community of the New Holland automatic field forage harvester is being held in the showroom of Charles Long, Sweet Valley.

According to Mr. Long, this New Holland harvester is the result of years of development and testing aimed at improving forage harvesting machinery. Typical of the changes local farmers will want to see is the new design which makes it easier to convert the machine to either a hay or a corn harvester.

By adjusting five bolts either the window or row-crop unit can be attached to the basic machine in 10 to 15 minutes. The machine includes a basic unit weighing only 2,750 pounds. To this can be attached either the 275-pound window unit or the 575-pound row-crop unit.

The harvester has been designed to operate at high capacity while assuring uniform cutting with a minimum of power. There is a crawler-type upper feeding apron to provide positive feeding and uniform cutting. A special cutting angle lowers the power requirements. The basic unit has dual shock coil springs to provide a floating unit for either corn or hay attachment and is adjustable up and down without tilting the basic unit.

A 3-way distributor elbow permits loading wagon or truck at the rear or either side. The New Holland harvester has a capacity of 3 to 6 tons in dry hay, 5 to 8 tons in 40 per cent moisture hay, 8 to 15 tons in hay silage and 10 to 25 tons per hour in corn silage.

It has an individual engine drive with 31 h.p. air-cooled engine. Cutting lengths vary from 1/4" to 4". The 75-inch wide hay attachment picks up hay with steel fingers on a drum. Stones are removed before the hay moves into the cutter head.

The corn attachment is of single row construction with sickle bar. Gathering points are 27 inches apart to make the unit easy to guide along rows. The harvester is manufactured by the New Holland Machine Company, New Holland, Pennsylvania.

Ice Cream Co. Observes First Anniversary

Modern Dairy Bar Was The Dream Of Clyde N. Cooper

Forty Fort Ice Cream Company is this week celebrating the first anniversary of the opening of its modern Dairy Bar at Fernbrook by giving away one pint of Freezer Fresh ice cream with every half gallon purchase of any of its sixteen delicious flavors.

Although it got off to a slow start last season, because of construction delays which held up the opening until June 25, the Dairy Bar immediately began to attract scores of customers—and has served as many as 5,000 persons in one day.

Creation of Pennsylvania's most modern Dairy Bar is the dream of Clyde Cooper of Dallas who purchased the Cork Pine Dairy at Lehman nine years ago and two years later purchased the Fernbrook Dairy, which he later consolidated with Forty Fort and Sunny Slope Dairies. Today the Dairy, which is a separate entity from the Ice Cream Company, serves customers throughout the Back Mountain Area and in Wyoming Valley from West Pittston to Nanticoke.

Milk supply is obtained from local herds from as far north as Laceyville, to Sands Farm Dairy at Carverton, and from Sweet Valley. Much of this milk and cream is used in production of ice cream for the Dairy Bar and for the company's three other ice cream stores located in Kingston, Forty Fort and Ashley.

On ordinary days the Dairy Bar employs eighteen local young men and women under the supervision of William DiBuo, manager, but at peak periods this number is frequently doubled.

Within recent weeks, the company has leased ground from Luzerne County Gas & Electric Corporation to provide another 150 front feet of parking space. It has also added another automobile service wing and window adjacent to the new parking area.

The company is locally owned, members of the firm being all local dairymen. Its creation is another evidence that local businessmen are alert to the needs of a growing community and stand ready to meet them.

Women's Club Meeting

A special meeting of Dallas Junior Woman's Club will be held in the American Legion Home Monday, June 26 at 8 o'clock, to plan a Tom Thumb Wedding for September. All members are urged to be present to serve on committees. Mrs. Charles Mahler and Mrs. Wilson Garinger are co-chairmen.
