You Know Me

By

Al, Himself

We've had quite a few persons ask us why we haven't written anything about our daughter's wedding.

"Why," we said, "we didn't realize that you were so interested in our family."

"It's not your family," they replied, thereby depressing our ego, "it's weddings that we like to hear about."

Well, we were glad to know that, for we always like to write about something we consider ourselves an expert on.

This column is for men only, because we realize that no matter how much we know about weddings, we can't tell women anything as they know all about that sort of thing before they sprout their eye teeth. Little girls talk matrimony over with their mamas while nestling on their breast, while their bottle is being heated, while their diapers are being changed, while a finger is being rubbed gently on their gums seeking the first tooth.

While mama is dressing them in the morning and undressing them at night they'll gurgle and coo replies about their future that man can never understand. The father and husband goes through these years in more of a daze than usual. He wonders what the baby and mama are talking about. He will not know until his first daughter gets married and all at once he realizes that this training for a woman to become a good wife has been going on since the nurse announced, "It's a girl!"

Now, here's some expert advice to fathers with marriageable daughters:

The first thing to do is to purchase a gross of pencils and a ream of paper. Sharpen the pencils and keep sheets of paper around the house in convenient places for mama to write down things for you to do. Don't worry if this list reaches gigantic proportions. Ninety per cent of the orders will be changed the day of the wedding anyway. We failed to supply the paper and pencils so our orders were given to us verbally, and of course we forgot every one of them.

The next thing to do is to plan your wardrobe. The women will be too busy with the bride's and bridesmaids' dresses, plus their own, to wonder if you have a clean shirt for your daughter's wedding day. Don't make the mistake we did. We arose the day before the nuptials and discovered we had eighteen shirts in our drawer, fourteen of them of the sport variety, and only four dress shirts, which had frayed collars; so we had to tie a string around our finger to be sure to buy a dress shirt. We tried to get by with a short sleeve sport shirt, but no soap.

Now, don't you fathers feel too badly about walking down the aisle with your daughter. We know that you think it silly to start off with the left foot and bring the right one up even with it, and then the right as if you didn't know where the other foot was coming from, but the women like it that way; so, nothing can be done about it. You will find that your daughter is an expert in this sort of thing even though she never did it before, and as you stumble down the altar trying to keep in step with her no one will be looking at you anyway.

Above all, keep cool. Two hours before the wedding we had to take a neighbor of ours down to the Country Club where the reception for the bride's and bridegroom's families was to be held, so she could decorate the wedding table. We were delayed there and didn't arrive home until 11:55, just thirty-five minutes prior to the ceremony.

We went swimming. "When I saw you go to the lake in a bathing suit so late," said one of the bridesmaids, "I just gave up."

But heck, we and our daughter were ready and waiting in the car ten minutes before the rest of the party put on their hats.

The last important piece of advice to you fathers is to be sure to lock your bedroom door the day of your daughter's wedding so that when you want to crawl in between the sheets about 2 a.m., fourteen hours after the ceremony, you won't have to remove three dozen wraps and hats of female relatives who are still out in the living room telling mama, "How beautiful the bride looked."

Dallas Reservists Train at Fort Lee

Special to the Post
Fort Lee, Va., Aug. 19—Two Army reservists, Sgt. Robert Fielding and 1st Lieut. Grant E. Loreman, from Dallas RFD 2 are among the sixteen from Luzerne County who are participating in two weeks' military active duty with Quartermaster Corps units undergoing on-the-job field training at the Quartermaster Center under the command of Major General R.C.L. Graham. They are training with the 486th QM Group and the 937th QM Service Company.

Among the subjects in the curriculum are rail movements, weapons training, traffic control, warehouse operations, textile and shoe repair, staff organization and procedures. An overnight bivouac problem has been scheduled for the last two days of camp at the A. P. Hill Military Reservation.

Purpose of the summer training camp is to provide an opportunity for all reservists to receive practical training in their Army specialty. Intensive technical instruction and administrative training as well as inspection of new equipment and visits to nearby depots have been included in the program.
