Connecticut Saga

three of the four roses in that blast but he still had the fourth one to toss. "Things are getting so tough down there that next year we'll be under the trucks draining the anti-freeze for a little Christmas cheer." Suddenly he became the man of the house. He sprang to his feet demanding his dinner and a look at his new son both in the same breath. He tripped over the electric train the playful little cousins had spread out all over the dining room floor and fell flat on his face. It was as good as a Charlie Chaplin comedy any day.

Mother had long since given up trying to keep things on a high intellectual plane. In falling Ken had disconnected the A. C. wires from the control box. Punchy tried vainly to repair the damage but couldn't so asked the last man in the world whom he should have asked what A. C. meant and where the wires went. Ken said he didn't know and didn't care but Punchy kept asking anyway. Suddenly a ray of knowledge found its way into Ken's brain and he said quietly to Punchy, "A. C. means After Christ and it doesn't have anything to do with a train," and after imparting that great bit of information made for the kitchen and his dinner.

When the cousins started to bang each other on the head with the trains instead of letting them run on the tracks we decided it was time to go. Time to go home? Well, not directly. A little side trip to Roger Williams Park was in order. Seems like everybody else in that large city had the same idea so we just followed the crowd. The park does have a beautiful display every year and I consoled Wade, who was driving, by telling him that we used to take him to see the display there when he was a little boy like Punchy. "Like Punchy?" he asked in a scared voice and we had to laugh. In fact we had come across an old snap shot of Wade and one of the donkeys in the manger scene and Punchy was quite intrigued by it. He hastened to tell Wade about it and Wade asked Punchy how he knew it was him and Punchy, who fortunately has inherited Norm's wit said, "You were the one with the hat on." Evidently having the engine of the electric train banged on his head once or twice earlier in the evening hadn't slowed him down any.

Soon we were back at Mother's cozy little red house and after having some cocoa and cookies put the boys to bed "temporarily" to quote Mother who knew darn well they would be racing around by six in the morning. We all felt it was too bad they couldn't drive to meet their father on the six-thirty bus. Wade said he would get up with the boys and take them down with him to meet their Dad. Norm is a little like the father in "Cheaper by the Dozen." He likes to line his boys up and look them over while they stand at attention. He says the only thing he doesn't like is the long time between sons but he can't blame that on me.

The living alarm clocks went off a little before six and routed Wade out of his bed and the three sons were off to meet their father.

Dallas Boy Scouts, 281 Have Overnight Camp

Twenty-two boys from Dallas Boy Scout Troop 281 spent Friday night at a cabin owned by Forty Fort Troop 123, near Farmers Inn. Boys were transported in cars loaned by Harold Harleman, Francis Dunham, Fred Price, Zel Garinger and Leslie Barstow. A planned menu was served by committee members, and scout games were played.

Scott Brooks and Jackie Berti passed their tenderfoot tests.

Buys Registered Bull

Elmer J. Miller, Dallas, Pennsylvania, recently acquired a registered Holstein-Friesian bull from the herd of Shoemaker Brothers, Wyoming. Change of ownership for this animal, "Alcartra Gerben Ormsby Piebe" has been officially recorded by The Holstein-Friesian Association of America.
