SAFETY VALVE

a man could hide in one. We think of them as oil jars, actually they were cupboards, submerged in the ground and used for food storage.

I found a battle axe for Nelson's present, I am sure it dates back to the crusades, also a double barreled pistol. It will take me weeks to get the rust off both and eventually they will find a place in the living room, which already has the appearance of a museum.

Sincerely
Helen Booth

OLIVER Cletrac CRAWLERS...

Front-mounted No. 895 QD Cultivator on Model "HG" 68.

Rear, semi-mounted No. 22-A Mower on Model "HG" 42.

designed for diversified farm work

Here's a crawler tractor—the Oliver "Cletrac" Model "HG"—built specifically for diversified farming, and in four center-to-center track widths: 68, 60, 42 and 31 inches to suit your cropping practices.

What's more, Oliver builds a variety of mounted tools to fit the wide tread models. When you buy some mounted tool—the No. 895 QD (Quick-Detachable) Cultivator, for instance—basic parts such as support pipes, levers and rocker shafts become component parts of several other attachments.

For full information on the broad line of front-mounted and pull-behind farm implements for Model "HG" tractors, see us. And, once you see how an Oliver "Cletrac" can pull, and find out how easily it handles, we believe you'll want one for your farm.
