

BRUCE WHITE MEETS FRIENDS AT BROADCAST OF "STRIKE IT RICH"

Thirteen year old Bruce White won a dollar and a great big hand at C. B. S.'s "Strike It Rich" television broadcast Wednesday morning in New York City—the dollar because he "clapped the hardest" in a young folks' contest—the applause from local Shriners when he said he came from Dallas, Pennsylvania.

Republican Candidate for District Attorney Is A Product of Will To Win Against Many Handicaps HAS PUBLIC ACCLAIM

TOIL WAS HIS LOT

ATTY. LOUIS G. FELDMANN

Night-school and a jacking of all trades with handyman jobs, to win higher education, offer an interesting background to the career of Attorney Louis C. Feldmann, Republican-endorsed candidate for District Attorney of Luzerne County. A native of Wilkes-Barre, Mr. Feldmann is State Commander of the Veterans' of Foreign Wars and has his home and law offices in the city of Hazleton. One of his best-remembered jobs while a college student was with the last staff of the Philadelphia Public Ledger whose last publisher was Cyrus H. K. Curtis of the Saturday Evening Post.

A home of the "old Wilkes-Barre" type was the birthplace of Mr. Feldmann. It was situated at the corner of South Main and Northampton streets in the county seat. His father, John Feldmann, was last office manager of the old Evening News whose publishers were the late Ambrose West and the late George J. Stegmaier. First schooling for Feldmann was in old Mayflower School. From there he went to grade school at Hill Street building and then to St. Mary's High School from where he was graduated in 1927.

Jobs as laborer and helper followed in Bethlehem and Chester and Feldmann was able to enroll for evening study at University of Pennsylvania in 1929. Loss of his newspaper job by shut-down brought a temporary halt to formal education. But, as many another boy did, Louis Feldmann found a new opportunity by taking work as a waiter, cook's chauffeur, hosiery salesman and caterer's salesman. In 1930 he was able to alternate toil with day-school attendance at Wharton School of University of Pennsylvania and in 1933 he won the degree of Bachelor of Science in Economics with graduation.

Awarded the Charles B. Cox Scholarship, which became a graduate scholarship, Mr. Feldmann once again had to seek supporting labor and he found it as odd-jobs man at the fraternity houses about the college campus. He subsequently added to his Pennsylvania degree the degree of Bachelor of Laws with graduation from Duquesne University. He was assigned to the first Adult Education Program and taught at Penn Treaty High School.

A competitive examination won for Feldmann a position as Stores Inspector for the State of Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board under Gifford Pinchot. He was promoted to the Control Board in 1942 and then was appointed Chief Investigator for O.P.A. at Pittsburgh. Despite the combination of work-and-school, Louis George Feldmann was top man in his graduating class, and despite success and proffered exemption he enlisted in the United States Marine Corps in June 1943. It was upon discharge from the Marines in 1945 that Mr. Feldmann opened his principal law offices in Hazleton with a branch office in Wilkes-Barre.

A native of Wilkes-Barre, later a resident of Kingston where he was a member of St. Ignatius Church congregation, Mr. Feldmann has had a unique career since September 10, 1909, the day of his birth. At present he is a member of Holy Trinity German R. C. Church in Hazleton, Luzerne County Law and Library Association, Pennsylvania Bar Association, American Bar Association, American Legion, Marine Corps League, Kiwanis Club, Pioneer Fire Company, Elks, Eagles, Moose, Catholic War Veterans, Veterans' of Foreign Wars, Knights of Columbus, with a long record of practice before Supreme and Superior courts as well as the courts of the county.

In announcing that Louis George Feldmann had been elected Commander of the Pennsylvania State Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, that patriotic group's convention said: "This veteran of the Asiatic-Pacific conflict was in the Third Marine Corps Division, Ninth Regiment, Company C. His rank of Sergeant was achieved in the bitter days of the Mariana Islands, but it is remembered that he was that kind of Marine who also was given special duties in various camps as well as at Marine Base, Parris Island, where he served as Drill Instructor."

Drake-Wear Post at Hazleton found Feldmann adept in adjudication of many organizational problems and in 1946 he became Post 589 Commander. He was elected Judge Advocate, then Council Commander, Department of Pennsylvania Judge Advocate, Junior Vice Commander, and after notable and varied service he rose to the highest state post of Pennsylvania Commander of the VFW in 1950. He is a member of the President's Conference on Children and Youth, and in promoting citizenship and its privileges and duties he has traveled every state of the nation.

Married to the former Anne R. McKernan, Mr. Feldmann and his family reside at 9 West Diamond avenue, Hazleton. Prominent in congregational work with Holy Trinity German R. C. Church, the Republican candidate for District Attorney of Luzerne County never theless has added to tremendous responsibilities in law and patriotism the active assistance that has given him recognition by the Salvation Army, Catholic Charities, Physically Handicapped Committee, Industrial Development Organization, Civil Defense Council, National Americanism Committee and other citizen organizations that have given the United States its present background of solidarity for whatever emergency may lie ahead.

In 1948 Mr. Feldmann won the Greater Hazleton Award as "the man who did most for the war veteran." For two years he was Chairman of the Civil Improvement Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.
