Martin's Magnificent No Hitter The State Department of High-Gives Orange Its Twelfth Victory ways this week completed the cent 2-0 no-hit, shut-out. Martin, invincible to the East Dallas batsmen, faced only 29 batters which is just two more than the perfect game of 27. Only one East Dallas batsman, Stanton, hit the ball out of the infield. With almost perfect control, Martin had the batters eating out of his hand as he mixed Orange an out-drop with a change of pace, very effectively throttling East Dalas with eleven strikeouts.

Warren Stanton, East Dallas pitcher, matched Martin up to the sixth inning when Len Ballas got the first hit of the ball game, a short fly to right field. If it had Jenks not been for some very loose defensive play behind Stanton in the ninth inning the two teams would in all probability be at it yet for both pitchers seemed to get stronger as the game lengthened. While Martin's pitching chore was monumental, Stanton's was only slightly less so as he faced the power laden Orange batting order and held them to two clean hits, the other was a misjudged fly, and two forunate runs.

Len Bellas was unquestionably the batting star of the afternoon. He garnered two hits, one a double. to have his credit two thirds of all the hitting done for both sides. Paul Kunkle had one hit, a single, which started out the proceedings n the ninth.

Kunkle opened the last half of the ninth with a sharp ground single down the third base line into left field. The throw-in went through the second baseman allowing Kunkle to take second. Len Bellas then lifted a routine fly ball to center field which fell for a double when the fielder lost it in the sun at the last minute. Kunkle scored easily. Al Bellas was a strike out victim for the first out. Harry Hughey bounced a slow roller Orange scored its final run. Orange 2 feeling. Red is the color of action as well as danger, and almost invariably preferred by men and young children. Blue, to most men, especially in the colder tones, is the least desirable.

Take a long, narrow room, says Mr. Smith, and its proportions can be corrected by proper painting as well as by thoughtful arrangement of long pieces of furniture. Paint both ends a darker tone of the two long side walls, and the room seems more nearly square, losing that Pullman car effect. Mr. Smith likes to work with rough stone and with split rails. The side of the house is apt to show a pile of rough flags almost any time, waiting to be transported by wheelbarrow to the back yard for use in another stone wall or an expanded terrace surrounding the outdoor grill.

Using the recommended methods for broadening a structure by correct painting and horizontal lines, he has worked out a nine-rail fence made of two-by-fours and painted white, set between two rough stone piers and easily unassembled in case a car should need to use that opening between house and next door neighbor's fence on Pioneer Avenue. On the other side, flanking the stone terrace at the rear, he has lovingly erected what used to be known as a snake fence, rounding up the split chestnut rails from somebody's modernization project.

This fence does not prove enough of a barrier to dogs, so a bit of unobstrusive chicken-wire supplements it at the bottom, with the black cocker spaniel and the standing work. The list includes the little cafe-au-lait spaniel able to Kirby Health Center; the Central get only their noses over the ob- YMCA; the Derr Memorial Presbystruction. They are affectionate terian and Kingston Presbyterian able galleries at the work of these master craftsmen. Our stay at Corning was not long enough, but we will return on another day. The trip is so short that any one living in the Back Mountain area should make it. On the return we varied our route by driving down Route 15 to Mansfield and Williamsport. At Steam Mountain we stopped at Fry Brothers Turkey Ranch for one of the best Turkey Dinners we have had since Thanksgiving-and all for a $1.25 per plate. Thousands of turkeys were on range there, and we watched them being fed as we sat at our table in the Ranch Restaurant.

The trip from there on in to Williamsport, through Benton and Kitchen Creek was as beautiful as that up the river.

We reached home after dark. We had completely forgotten the slow start and Myra's birthday, and that's what we wanted.

Next time you are invited to a Clambake take a trip to Corning. You'll enjoy it.

Herbert attended Kingston chools until ready for Seminary, his family having moved there from Wilkes-Barre when he was ready for the second grade. After finishing Seminary, he attended Cornell for two years, where he studied architecture. In 1927 he went into business with his father, Herbert Smith Senior, present Burgess of Dallas, and learned the decorating business from the ground dominating, the same then as now, up. But by golly I've got some Poultry Preparation here called MOYEX that I know is good . . . I know 'cause I've seen it work. MOYEX is a non-poisonous preparation that successfully treats Coccidiosis, Liver diseases, Newcastle, Blackhead and etc. It's made by a fellow I know real well who's been in this business a long time, and he comes from Bloomsburg, maybe you know him. Anyway, if you have some sickness in your flock, give it a try . . . it'll do the job.
