ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH

Another opportunity may be granted to God's people everywhere to worship Him in His Church on Sunday, August 19. If we were to say, "Our Lord Jesus Christ will be here in Person on Sunday," our Churches would not be large enough to accommodate all our people. The truth of the matter is, He is here now in the Presence of His Holy Spirit. Christians can understand this—others must be helped. It is with this thought in mind that at The Service in St. Paul's on Sunday at 11, the Rev. F. W. Mook, Jr., will use as his sermon theme "Co-Workers." Members, friends and tourists are most cordially welcome.

Sunday school will be held at the usual hour—9:45 A. M. The lesson will be "The Christian and His Government." Read before hand the Scripture lesson in Luke 20:19-26 and I Peter 2:13-17. We have classes for all ages.

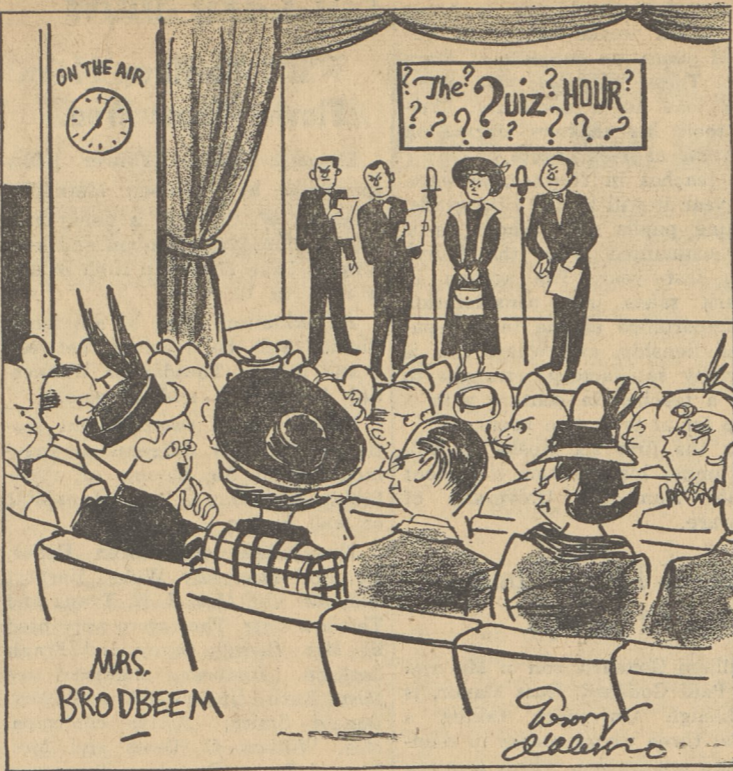

Services in the Methodist Churches of Alderson-Noxen Charge on Sunday will be held as follows:

Ruggles worship service, 8:45 A. M., Church School, 10 A. M.

Noxen worship service with sermon by the pastor, 10 A. M.;

Penna. Leads In Parasite War On Japanese Beetles

Pennsylvania leads all states in long-time efforts to kill off Japanese beetles through distribution of other insects that are "sworn enemies" of the little brown and green beetles which currently are destroying corn silk, roses and many other plants in virtually every part of the State.

Colonies of beetle parasites known as tiphia wasps, first imported 25 years ago from Korea, have been liberated in 560 different locations where heavy infestations of the Jap beetles have been reported according to Dr. Thomas L. Guyton, director, Bureau of Plant Industry, State Department of Agriculture. There are now millions of these "digger" wasps scattered over the State, aiding in the killing of beetle grubs underground. About 400 colonies have been distributed in Maryland and approximately 375 in New Jersey, records show.

Jap beetles, according to early reports to the Department, are not as heavy in numbers this year as last in the Harrisburg and southeastern Pennsylvania area. However, they are appearing in larger numbers than ever in certain central and western Pennsylvania areas.

The Jap invaders arrived in Philadelphia 32 years ago, buried as grubs in the soil of some plants imported from Japan. Since then they have spread to all parts of the Commonwealth except for a score of townships in the northwestern corner, south and east of Erie.

Parasitic tiphia wasps were imported from Korea in 1925-26 when a colony was established at Valley Forge. Each year new colonies of female tipthias have been collected there, and in recent years from a colony established on a Department of Agriculture farm near Harrisburg. The wasps fly for only a few days during mating season. Females then burrow into the ground to deposit eggs on the soft underside of beetle grubs, laying only one egg on each 20 to 50 grubs. When the wasp egg hatches the larvae devour the beetle grub, a case of "grub eat grub".

Another instrument of death to Jap beetles is what is known as "milky disease" which harms nothing except Jap beetle grubs underground. It was first used in Pennsylvania about 16 years ago and since then it has been spread on practically every golf course, cemetery, park and other grassland areas where beetles have been found to exist in large numbers.

With both of these beetle-destroying aids it will still take years to get the pest down to the point where it is no longer a menace or scourge. Such a condition now exists in Philadelphia and surrounding counties where most Jap Beetles have "gone native" and are considered no more destructive than most other common insects within the area, except that they continue to damage blooms of roses and some other plants.

Where beetles are highly destructive, the use of wettable DDT as a spray provides relief, repeated at intervals to keep new leaf growth covered.
