Noxen

The firemen decided to buy the Fire Hall from Mr. and Mrs. Earl Crispell at their February meeting. The hall can then be used for parties and public gatherings.
Dogs and cats are being very well confined since rabies is spreading so rapidly. Children have also been kept close to home.
Mrs. William Keiper has been ill at her home for the past three weeks. She is somewhat improved.

Noxen Native Dies in Philadelphia

Mrs. Inez Wyant Kabusk, native of Noxen, but resident of West Wyoming since marriage, died in Philadelphia last Thursday while visiting her sisters, Mrs. Thomas Smith and Mrs. George Space.
Mrs. Kabusk, 46, was stricken with a heart attack.
The body was sent to Nulton's Funeral Home, where services were conducted by Rev. Ruth Underwood on Monday, followed by burial in the family plot in Beaumont Cemetery.
Mrs. Kabusk was a daughter of the late Arthur and Anna Newberry Wyant.
She is survived by her husband Thomas; five children, one of whom is with the armed forces in Korea, Corporal Thomas Kabusk Jr.; Patsy, Betty, Paul and James, at home; and the two sisters mentioned above.

The Interesting Experience Of Being Hospitalized

By EDWARD H. KENT

Have you ever been sick for a few weeks? To say nothing of months—Well, it's no fun but it is interesting.

You just don't feel right, you go to the doctor, that just makes sense. Don't try to doctor yourself. You very seldom hear of a man acting as his own lawyer, and if he does he gets in a jam.
All right, the Doc looks you over, pokes you a few times where you don't like to be poked, asks a lot of personal questions, puts a blow-out plate on your arm, takes your blood pressure, sticks some needles in you for blood tests, has a few X-Ray pictures taken, all suitable for framing—and comes up with the verdict that you have the XYZ's.

Oh boy, you think—XYZ's—I've only heard of three people who ever had that—two in New York and one in Missouri—I wonder if this doc knows much about the XYZ's. Before the week is out you hear of two dozen people who have had the same thing and you feel deflated. You are no longer a medical curiosity. Perhaps the doctor does know about it after all.

The doctor hands you a prescription—"Take these pills, do so and so, don't eat anything you like, come back in ten days."

In ten days you go back, feeling like the end of a misspent life. The doc looks you over again and tactfully suggests that you would have better care, be less of a burden to your family, and get well sooner if you went to the hospital for a few days.

Good night, you say to yourself, that will cost me as much as my income tax.

Well, it won't, especially if you have hospital insurance as over half the people in this country do. There is no place where you get as much for your money as in a well-run hospital, especially when a big percentage is insurance company money.

All right, you decide you will take the doc's advice and go to the hospital. Now there will be some things about it you may not like. There are probably some things you would not like about the newly renovated White House if you occupied it after 1953—but don't scream to heaven about things for the first fifteen or twenty minutes, give the place a chance.
Don't lean too heavily on the buzzer for the nurse for the first few minutes. You know that business about catching more flies with sugar than with vinegar? That goes for nurses, too.
It would be very difficult to find a more conscientious, hard-working, pleasant group of people than the general duty and student nurses in a hospital. Just give them a chance. The bed—sure it's high. You climb on a stool, crawl in, and find it's very comfortable. Every time the doctor drops in to see you he carefully kicks the stool under the middle of the bed where you can't reach it. This is known as "Medical Ethics" and nothing can be done about it.

Then there is the very important matter of gelatin. It seems to be the cornerstone of at least two meals a day in the hospital. There is red gelatin, orange gelatin, blue gelatin, green gelatin, and the chemists are now working on a rainbow gelatin.

Now if you are not passionately fond of gelatin, don't raise -er-don't kick about it for a couple of days. Then get word to the diet kitchen, tactfully, that you think the gelatin in that hospital is the most delicious you ever tasted, but too much gelatin is not good for fallen arches, and much as you love it you must ease up a bit, and could they substitute some ordinary ice cream?

If you work it right, you might get away with it.
Doctors, nurses, administrators, surgeons, pathologists, and firemen are all a necessary part of the hospital team, but the quarterback who calls the signals and makes the place click is the dietician. A poor dietician can ruin a hospital before your incision is healed.

The great thrill that comes from being sick is to find how many wonderful, marvelous friends you have. You never realized it before, and it almost makes being sick worth while—if it doesn't last too long.

Your friends will go to no end of trouble to come to see you, send you flowers and books, write you letters, send Calvert and Old Crow, send plants, get-well cards and candy. This last is very welcome. I never heard of a nurse who hated candy.

So many people do so many kind things for you that you are just overwhelmed.
It's a very interesting experience. Try it.
