Hale Garey, 73,
Dies In Hospital

Funeral Scheduled
Monday At 2

Hale Garey, 73, resident of Shavertown for the past thirty-five years, but native of Lehman, passed away Thursday, 2 a.m., at General Hospital, where he had been admitted critically ill on Wednesday.

Mr. Garey had suffered a heart attack the week before Christmas and had been a patient at Nesbitt Hospital for five weeks. Though allowed to come home, he had never improved.

He had retired from the trucking business some years previously.

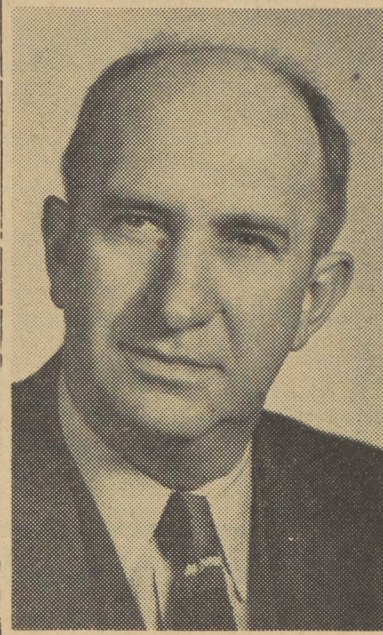

His parents were the late Lewis and Edmere Garey. His wife, the former Audrey Ide, died in 1931.

Two sons, Willard, Shavertown, and James, Baltimore and Harveys Lake, survive. Also three grandchildren, Richard, Peter, and Mary Beth; and a brother Arthur, Wilkes-Barre.

Funeral services will be conducted Monday at 2 from Howard Woolbert Funeral Home, Rev. Robert D. Yost officiating. Burial will follow in the family plot at Idetown.

WILLIAM A. AUSTIN

Know Your Neighbor

Don't let that William A. fool you. He's still Arch Austin, all 230 pounds of him, and tall enough and broad enough of beam to carry the poundage without losing the proportions that made him a four-letter man at Bloomsburg.

With Arch, it was a toss-up whether to go in for Physical Education prominently, or just coach on the side while pursuing his favorite studies in science.

He could have been a professional golfer and he's a past-master at skiing, but it was in football, baseball, basketball and track that he earned his letters.

Mr. Austin, Supervising Principal of Monroe Township schools, is an educator who considers education as three-dimensional, not confined to the class-room. Solid citizenship is his goal, with courses tailored to the demands of a rural community.

It is in the interest of fostering citizenship, freely translated as good sportsmanship, that he sponsors the annual vacation trip to Canada for the older boys in Beaumont school. After graduation, the expedition gets under way for a two weeks fishing jaunt, unencumbered by good clothes, fancy fixings, or the female of the species.

Straight north they drive, towing a boat trailer bearing a fourteen-foot runabout with outboard motor, a twelve-foot canoe, and a rubber boat. The cars are loaded with equipment for roughing it, with enough dried milk and eggs and other staples to reduce the high cost of vacationing.

Arch says it can be done for a dollar a day, with fish for the mainstay of the meals. Any boy from fourteen up who can raise the price is eligible to go, and graduate students nostalgic for their former school and associates, are welcome.

The annual fishing trip has been going on for a long time, ever since 1940, though the war years cut into it. With the end of World War II, the June trek was resumed.

The destination is Long Lake, Ontario. Usually the housing is cabins, though one year the boys camped on an island. That year the campers reported that they got awfully tired of dried eggs and milk, but that they certainly kept down expenses.

This year the expedition will be postponed until later in the summer, on account of a projected tour of the country, in the course of which Mr. and Mrs. Austin expect to cover a real deal of territory.

If they follow accepted tradition, they will write it all up and publish it on the installment plan in the Dallas Post.

The trip is in the nature of an antidote for the time Arch took his wife to Canada, and bunked in a moose-hunter's cabin.

Mrs. Arch woke up in the middle of the night with a sensation of movement in her bed.

"Arch," she hissed, "what's wrong with the bed?"

"Nothing's wrong," he granted sleepily, "g'wan back to sleep."

Mrs. Arch subsided.

In the morning she looked up toward a rafter, and there, frisking along the logs, one after another, were dozens of little deer-mice.

And in the bed, deep beneath the covers, was the evidence.

All the big boys around Beaumont know how to handle guns. Each year school is dismissed for the first day of the deer season, and the principal guides a party into the woods for a day of hunting.

Mr. Austin says that principles of good sportsmanship learned in the woods will stand by boys when they are men.

The ski-lift at Traver's Park is one of his pet projects. This year there have been only two weeks of favorable weather for skiing, but one week providentially came during the Christmas vacation, and the ski-lift was busy hoisting students to the summit.

Mr. Austin has been principal at Beaumont since 1932, a teacher there for four years previous to that.

Arthur Brown Returns
Symbol Of Sacrifice

Broken-hearted parents of Corp. Frederick Brown, killed in Korean action November 2, have returned to headquarters the Order of the Purple Heart and an engraved scroll, awarded to their son posthumously.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown, Dallas, claim that they want no part of an award for a death which they hold was due to a blunder in placing an untrained man in the forefront of the battle.

Corp. Brown was trained for the heavy artillery at Fort Sill, Okla.

Works, and subsequently in charge of personnel for the remaining two and a half years.

Back again as supervising principal, Mr. Austin varies his administrative post by teaching physics and chemistry in alternating years, also biology and science on the same plan of rotation.

And of course there is always a team to coach.

It's the principal's coaching that makes the bigger boys invincible at baseball during the fishing expedition. Parham, Canada, the challengers, can always mop up the Beaumont boys at softball, but when the switch is made to hardball, they cave.

Biology is his favorite subject, and the one he would teach by preference. He took three summers of biology at Susquehanna to add a fourth year of work and a degree of BS to the three-year course at Bloomsburg.

He obtained a Masters degree at Pennsylvania State in Educational Administration.

It was while he was vice president of the Dramatic Club at Bloomsburg that he met the future Mrs. Austin, then Ooe Beryl Williams of Edwardsville. She tried out for a part, and made a conquest. They were married in 1924.

Mrs. Austin, in addition to teaching alongside her husband in Beaumont School, takes time to write a snappy local column for the Dallas Post.

Arch goes dredging up the bottom of Bowman's Creek every once in a while, in company of Chuck Reiff, head of Biology Department at Wilkes. On one of these occasions the two of them stirred up an enormous brown trout, fit partner to the one which is mounted at Travers Park. The pair made a futile grab for it, but it eluded them.

Arch says you can't beat the brown trout in Bowman's Creek, even if most of them do get away.

Mr. Austin's experience during the war years laid the foundation for charter membership and secretaryship of Tri-County Personnel Directors Association of which Dr. Eugene Farley President of Wilkes, was also a charter member.

Mr. Austin is a past president of Wyoming County Teachers Association; past district deputy of Odd Fellows for Wyoming County; chairman of local unit of the Salvation Army; manager of the Beaumont Baseball Club; was chairman of fuel rationing during the war.

He is a Mason, member of Bloomsburg Consistory and the Mystic Shrine.

Vital statistics show that he was born in Beaumont, and that his mother, Adelaide Ryman Austin, 89, is the oldest living member of the Richard Ryman family.

Arch was educated at Beaumont for the first three years of high school, transferring to Wilkes-Barre for the senior year.

Upon the death of his father, he ran the farm as well as teaching school.

His brother, E. Ray Austin, is supervising principal of Laurel Run School.

He has a sister, Mrs. C. D. Eggleston, who lives at Vernon.

There are no children, but all the school children in Beaumont belong peculiarly to the Austins.

homa, receiving almost five months of intensive training. He had had absolutely no training in the use of a rifle.

Arrived in Korea October 8, with expectation of preliminary training in use of small arms and infantry tactics, he was rushed into battle without sufficient experience to enable him to hold his own against the enemy.

Mrs. Brown says that if he had met death in his own outfit, the 967th Armored Field Artillery, handling one of the big guns with which he was familiar, the family would have taken the death as a tragedy, but not a needless sacrifice of a teen-age boy. Fred passed his nineteenth birthday on the transport enroute to his death.

Will Open Next Thursday
Dallas Outdoor Theatre

Dallas Outdoor Theatre will open for the season on Thursday March 27 with "Bird of Paradise" as the featured attraction. Among the many innovations for the season will be a new soft ice cream machine with a capacity for 400 cones per hour.

Verne Groff, manager, also announces an improvement in pictures with much later and better productions scheduled. There are no changes in admission. Children under 12 will be admitted free.
