Holiday Has Story On Pennsylvania Rivers

Under the title "The Lovely Rivers of Pennsylvania," a twelve-page cover story in the October issue of Holiday pays tribute to the waterways of Pennsylvania.

In colorful photographs and text, David E. Scherman eulogizes the Ohio, the Monongahela, the Allegheny, the Susquehanna, the Brandywine, the Schuylkill, the Delaware, and their tributaries, summing up his praise of the rivers with this statement: "At most, they have made Pennsylvania the keystone of the nation's wealth—at the very least they have made it a domain of unending beauty."

Mr. Scherman's story includes accounts of the historical, cultural and commercial significance of Pennsylvania's rivers, and he maintains that to Pennsylvania, as to no other state, its rivers are all-important.

Nineteen photographs accompanying Mr. Scherman's article are for the most part full-color scenes of Pennsylvania's major rivers. Shown also, however, are some of Pennsylvania's lesser but beautiful tributaries, and the cover portrait which introduces the Holiday article pictures the 121-year-old Delaware Canal, which parallels the Delaware River through Washington's Crossing Park in Bucks County.
